A Prohibition Election.
People Tired of Crime.
A 1932 Candidate.
The Cosmos Has a Soul.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

EVERYBODY TALKED about the election yesterday. Half as many will talk about it today. After Monday it will be part of the past history. Nobody will talk about it.

IF REPUBLICANS lose control of Congress, they will know that their failure to understand public sentiment on prohibition is responsible for their disaster.

Everybody in big cities, except those responsible for the government, seems to realize that crime born of prohibition, with its toll of billions a year, presents a problem considerably more important than any drink question. Cities like New York and Chicago, having confessed themselves unable to cope with bootleg crime, could hardly be expected to accept a condition of crime government permanently.

ELECTION RESULTS in New York, Illinois, New Jersey, Massachusetts are a protest against prohibition.

Any effort to interpret the election as a vote against President Hoover must fail. Some Democratic votes were cast perhaps by Republicans out of work.

But there was no voting against Hoover. Even the dullest know that he has nothing to do with this depression, except that his passive upholding of prohibition supports a condition that gives to criminals an income larger than that of the United States government and deprives the government of a legitimate income of at least one billion dollars a year.

JOHN D. PERRY, who owns several newspapers in Florida, Pennsylvania and elsewhere, says:

"There is really nothing much the matter with the country that intelligent advertising couldn't cure in a short time. Even an amendment of the Volstead Act to permit the manufacture of light wines and beer would, in six months, absorb from one-half to two-thirds of our idle labor and would produce approximately one billion dollars revenue to the government."

But Southern Democrats and Northern Republicans will fight such amendment.

GOV. ROOSEVELT'S overwhelming victory in New York by an unheard-of plurality of 750,000 creates an important candidate for 1932.

But behind that possibility sitteth Al Smith, within the shadow, keeping watch above his own.

Would former Gov. Smith approve the nomination of Gov. Roosevelt in 1932? If he were nominated without Mr. Smith's approval, Gov. Roosevelt would have little chance of election.

THE DEFEAT of Mrs. Ruth McCormick by Col. James Hamilton Lewis means that the Senate will gain considerably in old-fashioned courtesy. Col. Lewis being the most polite man in the world, and lose a great deal in new-fashioned energy, which Mrs. Ruth McCormick admirably represents.

THE SENATE would have heard from Mrs. McCormick truths, disagreeable and important, which it will not hear from Senator Lewis. Mrs. McCormick was defeated by nearly half a million, primarily because she is dry by conviction in a state overwhelmingly wet and thoroughly tired of domination by bootleg crime.

IN NEW YORK another Ruth, Mrs. Pratt, wins her congressional race, and vindicates womanhood's right to a share in political activity. She is a wet by conviction, and was elected as a wet, although like Mrs. McCormick, she is a total abstainer. Women seem to take the law seriously. A wet woman in politics is personally dry. Eighty per cent of dry masculine politicians smell of bad whisky.

MR. MORROW'S election, announced as a certainty in this column two or three months ago, is a good thing for New Jersey. That state will have in the Senate a man who gets what he goes after. And Mr. Morrow, on behalf of New Jersey, will go after everything in sight.

It is amazing that states so rarely secure the services of men of great ability, allowing nobodies to build up false reputations and then electing them.

GIFFORD PINCHOT'S victory in Pennsylvania disappoints some able and sincere men who believed that his election would be bad for the state.

On the other hand, Mr. Pinchot's victory annoys and disappoints every political and other crook in the state of Pennsylvania, including many conspicuous Republican bosses that deserted their party to emphasize their disgust at the nomination of an honest man.

SIR JAMES JEANS, most brilliant living astronomer, whose facts and figures about the universe make you feel ten million times smaller than a grain of mustard seed, discovers "that the universe shows evidence of a designing or controlling power that has something in common with our own individual minds." Jeans does not find in this designing control any "emotion, morality, or esthetic appreciation."

He describes this cosmic super-power as possessing "a tendency to thinking a way which we describe as mathematical."

SINCE EVERYTHING that Jeans sees and understands is the product of a finite mind locked up in a British skull, why not conclude that Jeans' mind

BUCS TRADE BARTELL TO PHILLIES

Get Thevenow, Willoughby In Exchange for Peppery Shortstop; No Cash Paid

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Richard (Dick) Bartell, scrappy shortstop of the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, this afternoon was traded to the Philadelphia Nationals for Shortstop Thomas (Tommy) Thevenow and Pitcher Claude Willoughby.

In making the announcement, Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pirates, said that the swap was made on a straight exchange plan. There was no cash consideration.

Owner Dreyfuss and the Philadelphia officials completed the transaction over the telephone. Apparently the negotiations had been under way for week.

CLASHED WITH DREYFUSS

The aggressive Bartell's departure may have been hastened by a controversy in which he was the storm center. The shortstop had a bit of row over transportation money with President Dreyfuss a few days before the season closed. He was suspended without pay at the time.

Bartell, it is reported, was wrong in his stand, but this incident is supposed to have been the natural outgrowth of a season of strained feelings between the player and his employers. Dick held out at the beginning of the training period and his baseball excursion of the summer months

COLDEST NIGHT OF SEASON DUE

A cold wave, accompanied by light snow flurries, gripped Pittsburgh and environs today, with the prospect that tonight the mercury will drop to around 20, the lowest mark of the season.

This morning the temperature fell to 27, one degree above the previous seasonal minimum, recorded October 20.

Election Defeats More Popular Than Victories

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

November 4, 1930, will rattle down in hysteria as the day of daze.

It was a day on which the ballot was a complaint blank.

It proved that a moth cannot get very far in a camphor bag.

It proved you cannot judge the depth of the well by the length of the pump handle.

It proved that the government of the people, for the people and by the people, must have people to make it a government.

It stigmatized the hybrid politician who was wet in the city, dry in the country and how-have-you-been in the suburbs.

Kipling calls the man who is neither meat, fowl nor good red herring, a cosmopolouse.

His job is to be a hypocrite. And he is in love with his work.

He was snowed under so deep they will think he is a violet in the spring.

The man who carried water on both shoulders was a scorched gander when the public discovered you can get more through a hose.

And for the first time in politics, the defeats were more popular than the victories.

STATE LEAD OF PINCHOT GROWS

Rural Area Returns Swell Total; Allegheny County Plurality Over 72,000

The victory of Gifford Pinchot in the governorship race and James J. Davis in the United States Senate race was emphasized as additional returns from outlying districts were received and checked.

The Pinchot lead is expected to be about 80,000 in the state, assured by the more than 72,000 lead which he amassed in Allegheny County.

Davis' state lead is approximately 800,000.

The governorship vote in Allegheny County, according to Gilbert C. Cloonan, of the county elections bureau, was: Pinchot 141,751, John M. Hemphill 70,503, with 20 districts missing. In the state it was: Pinchot 1,066,780, Hemphill 987,119. For United States senator the vote in the state was: Davis 1,276,436, Sedgwick Kistler 472,135.

After making this compilation, Cloonan obtained 11 additional districts, which gave Pinchot a lead of 72,146. Nine districts are still missing, all in the city, and in sections strongly in favor of Pinchot.

Figures on the state contest were from 8,269 out of 8,321 districts.

Compilation of figures from triplicate return sheets turned in at the Courthouse by election officers today gave Gifford Pinchot a county lead over John M. Hemphill, his Democratic-Liberal opponent, of 72,146. These figures were based on returns from 1,078 districts in the city and county.

The returning board which will officially canvass the vote was sworn in today and will work under the direction of Judge Ambrose B. Reid.

Its official figures usually tally closely with the unofficial canvass

75 Votes Separate Kansas Candidates

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—A lead of 75 votes was held by Frank (Chief) Haucke (Rep.), over Harry Woodring, (Dem.), in the neck-and-neck race for governor of Kansas, on the face of complete unofficial and revised returns today. Officials vote figures, including absentee ballots, will be necessary to determine the outcome.

CONGRESS VOTE IN DOUBT

By GEORGE R. HOLMES
International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Control of the Seventy-second Congress—the major political prize in Tuesday's election—swung crazily between the Democrats and Republicans today as slow-coming returns seeped in and muddled an already well muddled situation.

Nothing like the closeness between the two parties in both houses of Congress has ever been seen in American politics.

With Judge M. M. Logan, Democrat, apparently elected in Kentucky over Senator John M. Robison, Republican, and Einar Hoidale, Democrat, losing his lead in his race in Minnesota against the Victory Projects Pinchot Into Limelight of '32 Presidential Race

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—The tremendous political uprising in Pennsylvania, which elected Gifford Pinchot governor amid stunning surprises, will reverberate through the 1932 presidential campaign, it was generally conceded today, with the old Rooseveltian Progressive likely to make a race against President Hoover for the Republican nomination or as a third party independent.

This much seemed possible, if not probable, aside from the kaleidoscopic shifting of influence among the figures on Pennsylvania's political stage. There has been no such overturning of the Republican apple-cart in all the history of the state, as attended Pinchot's victory over the Liberal-Democrat, John M. Hemphill.

JOBS FOR 200 ON GAS LINE

Two hundred unemployed men yesterday were assured steady work for at least three months when they started on a $100,000 project for the Carnegie Natural Gas Company, a subsidiary of the Carnegie Steel Corporation.

A 30-inch natural gas line will be laid from behind the municipal airport to connect with other lines owned by the company along the Union Railroad near Dravosburg. More than 12,000 feet of pipe will be installed. Mike Mamilla, of Pittsburgh, is the contractor.

NUMBERS RAID NETS SEVEN

Seven men were arrested in a raid on an alleged clearing house pool in a private residence at 2402 Spring street, South Side, today, in which an adding machine, clearing house books and other equipment were reported confiscated by Detectives George Franz and Fred Good. The men, all held on charges of operating a lottery, are: Peter Hay, 32, 2402 Spring street; James Solomon, 1521 Cliff street; Stanley Andrews, 23, 1895 Crescent street; Mike Littel, 20, 214 Rothman street; Norman Gassel, 19, 2409 Spring street; Carl Tillman, 23, 2414 Charlotte street; Fred Krauter, 43, 2514 Arlington avenue.

Hay, the alleged proprietor, and Solomon, Andrews and Littel, said to be his collectors, are held in $2,500 bail bond or $1,000 cash bail; the others are held under $1,000 cash bail.

20 OTHERS TAKEN OUT ALIVE

Hunt Pushed for 5 Believed Still Entombed; President Of Mine Is Blast Victim

By AL GOUGH,
Staff Correspondent.

ATHENS, O., Nov. 6.—The death toll in the Sunday Creek mine blast here had reached 76, it was announced today by E. W. Smith, chief inspector of the Ohio Bureau of Mines, after a personal tour of the shaft 250 feet beneath the earth's surface.

Twenty survivors were taken out alive by rescue teams working under joint direction of the Ohio State Bureau of Mines and experts from the Pittsburgh branch of the United States Bureau of Mines.

The last of the bodies was brought to the surface at 7:30 this morning. The last two were burned beyond recognition. Rescue workers believe there may be five or six more bodies still in the mine.

PROBE STARTS AT ONCE

Immediately after the last body was brought up, the state and federal representatives began their investigation to determine the cause of the disaster. The state investigation will be under the direction of E. W. Smith, superintendent of the State Bureau of Mines. The federal probe will be directed by J. J. Forbes, of the Pittsburgh branch of the United States Bureau of Mines.

State and county officials took charge late yesterday following the gas explosion which wrecked the shaft entrance, cutting off the entombed men's escape. The list of dead and missing in this, one of the greatest mining tragedies in the Southern Ohio field, includes, in addition to working miners:

W. E. Titus, president of the Sunday Creek Coal Company.
George Cohen, vice president.
Hubert Lancaster, mining engineer.
Walter Hayden, mine superintendent.
Howard Upson, general manager.
Robert Parsons, of Zanesville, head of cement division, Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company.
Joseph Berger, superintendent

Davis Will Not Quit Till Congress Opens

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—James J. Davis, Republican senator-elect in Pennsylvania, returned here today and said he will retain his portfolio as secretary of labor in President Hoover's Cabinet until the very day Congress convenes, December 1, when he will resign and be sworn as a senator.

Pinchot-Hemphill Results, Analyzed, Offer Smiles

Post-election fans, who love to analyze political doings, today got several broad smiles out of Tuesday's ballot results.

John M. Hemphill, Democrat-Liberal, who lost to Gifford Pinchot for the governorship, made rather a stressful campaign on the fact that he was a friend of the working classes. Hemphill had powerful backing from the big utility interests and individual captains of industry, all of whom, Pinchot more than hinted, were not in this last political fight solely to aid the worker.

So the analysts scanned the returns and found:

Hemphill carried Sewickley Borough, home of millionaires and social center of the Pittsburgh district, by 856 votes to 556 for Pinchot. Sewickley Heights Township, if anything more swanky than the borough, gave Hemphill 106 votes and Pinchot 68. Osborne Borough, noted for its beautiful and expensive estates, gave Hemphill 79 to 75 for Pinchot. Edgeworth, in the same aristocratic zone, gave Pinchot 63 votes while Hemphill got 101.

A. L. Humphrey, president of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, who was one of the aforesaid industry captains to desert the Republican banner and support Hemphill, failed to get Hemphill over in his own district, the Fifth of Edgewood, where the vote was Pinchot, 161, Hemphill, 95.

In Wilkinsburg and Swissvale, where most of the Westinghouse workers reside, the latter apparently had not heard of Hemphill's interest in their cause, for both boroughs gave Pinchot more than comfortable majorities.

Coolidge Feet Declared Perfect by Expert

"Tootsies" of our presidents have come in all sizes and at least four knew nothing of corns and foot troubles while Mrs. Calvin Coolidge could be the envy of modern flappers, according to Dr. Peter Kahler, orthopedist, of New York, who fitted them.

President Warren G. Harding had the largest foot of those fitted by Dr. Kahler, the late chief executive wearing a 9½-C, though the orthopedist's grandfather prepared a 14-B for Abraham Lincoln. Theodore Roosevelt wore a 9-C, with Woodrow Wilson getting comfort from an 8½-B.

Calvin Coolidge, whom Dr. Kahler termed as possessing almost perfect feet, wears an 8-B. To Mrs. Coolidge goes honors for petite feet with a 4½ shoe. All the presidents, excepting Wilson, possessed strong, sturdy feet from outdoor experience. Wilson had the most tender feet, he said.

Federal and State Men Will Trace Reports Safety Law Ignored by Officials

Ohio Power Company, Zanesville.

LACK SAFETY EQUIPMENT

Lack of safety equipment for rescue work hampered the teams at the outset and probably cost the lives of many of the entombed, it was revealed here upon the arrival of the United States Bureau of Mines rescue car and two trucks late last night. Two rescue teams from the State Bureau of Mines were beaten back in several attempts to enter the shaft before the arrival of the government car.

It was not long after the arrival of the Pittsburgh crews that the first survivors were brought to the surface. Their faces blackened by the settling dust and afterdamp, they were a pitiful lot. Only three were able to walk. The others were carried on stretchers.

Rushed into a Red Cross first aid station set up in a wooden shack near the tipple, under the direction of Miss Ann Morgan, nurse, they were revived through the use of inhalators, to tell the graphic stories of their rescue.

DESCRIBES BLAST

Henry Forsbach, of Jacksonville, one of the first to impart the harrowing experiences he and his fellow workers went through in the underground workings, was loud in his praise of the mine foreman, John Dean, to whom he accredited his salvation. He said:

"I was switching a car, at the head of 11 West, when the blast caught me from behind, throwing me into the side of the car. I caught at the edge to keep from falling, but another blast blew me through a space between the car and the wall.

"I lay there for some time. I guess I was dazed, and then I came to, with Johnny Dean lifting me up and telling me to push along with him and the rest into a side butt where they started raising a canvas barricade.

"Dean and Earl Phillips did most of the work, and I thought both of them were done in. We were all ready to give up hope when the rescue team found us and tore down the barricade and brought us to the top."

FOREMAN SAVED

Forsbach is the father of three children. His wife and his children were at the shaft entrance when he was brought out, and were overjoyed at his escape. They followed the stretcher bearers into the Red Cross first aid station in cars.

How President Titus and seven other officials of the mining company lost their lives was told today by Arthur Nelson, who brought 22 bodies to the surface. He said:

"The sight of the mine was horrible. When we forced our way through debris we found Titus and his companions huddled behind a canvas barricade they had erected to stave off gas and possible flames. Titus was lying face downward. His companions were huddled around as if looking, before death, to his judgment in taking them to safety. Their shirts were torn away by clutching hands that grasped to keep from suffocation. One was nearly nude."

OME PRAYING

William Howard, another rescuer, told of finding a number of her men. He said:

"They were lying face downward, hands over their mouths, and moist cotton waste in their hands over their noses. From the position in which we found one victim he had been praying. Others were huddled as close as possible."

Dean, the foreman hero, was till unconscious in the first aid eadquarters this morning. Doors and nurses worked over him ll night long. They fed him two anks of oxygen and finally, along owards morning he rallied into eaceful slumber, but the physician attending him said he would ot gain consciousness, probably, ntil sometime later in the day. He was believed to be out of danger, however.

IINER PROVES HERO

Alphonso Jennings, one of the miners, escaped the blast and assisted seven of his fellow workmen to safety. He went back into the mine with the rescue workers and was a member of the team which located and brought to the surface the 20 survivors that had been barricaded by Foreman Dean.

Among the bodies brought to the surface was that of Frank Kern. His brother, J. Stanley Kern, a mine superintendent of West Virginia, arrived here during the night, joining the rescue workers in the search for survivors in the hope of finding the entombed relative. Another relative, John Kern, a volunteer worker with Battery E, 34th Field Artillery, Ohio National Guard, has been on duty all night long in the first aid station and every rescue team, returning to the surface, is met by the eager nephew with a query for his uncle.

INDS DAMAGE SLIGHT

Those claimed as victims in the disaster met death from carbon monoxide, according to the opinion of mine experts returning to the surface. Chief Inspector Smith declared that parctically all bodies were in excellent condition and the interior of the mine itself showed little evidence of the terrific blast which shook the foundations of the surface buildings. He said:

"Only a few of the stopings showed signs of damage. Those were blown out, but the area of destruction is confined to a small part of the mine.

"The explosion, from evidence we found, about a mile and three-quarters from the bottom of the entry shaft and the force of the blast evidently extended for a mile or more back into the mine in the direction of an air shaft about three miles from the main entrance."

Inspector Smith declared that in his belief they had located all but eight or 10 of the missing men and was positive in his statement that the death toll would amount to only 80 or 85.

CALLS OUT MILITIA

Gov. Myers Y. Cooper has ordered a complete investigation into the cause of the disaster. W. T. Blake, director of the Department of Industrial Relations, and two assistants arrived early last night to facilitate the industrial insurance claims and earlier in the day the governor ordered the district surrounding the mine under state militia control.

W. C. Christy, aide to the state attorney general, was put in charge of the militia, two units of infantry and two field artillery companies having been called into service on the roads and around the coal company property.

Every available ambulance has been pressed into service carrying bodies from the shaft to an improvised morgue in Stack's gorcery store at Millfield. The Red Cross, Salvation Army, American Legion and numerous other local organizations have supplied an army of welfare workers to provide relief to rescuers and rescued.

BLAME "SQUEEZE"

Throngs clamored for a peep at the shaft all night long. Kept at distance by state militiamen, men, women and children thronged about in the roads and fields surrounding the shaft until almost daylight. It was with difficulty that the roads were kept open for ambulance and official traffic, long lines of automobiles extending from back of Athens for 11 miles to the mine, just outside of the town of Millfield.

Unofficial explanation of the blast places the blame on a "squeeze" which occurred in one of the barricades between the mine now in operation and an old abandoned section.

It is claimed that gasses collected in the old mine, forcing between the coal and the brick and cement barricades, squeezing through soft coal in the floor, collected in the main heading. Open lights were in common use in the mine, it is claimed. The official party of President Titus, it is said, was equipped with open carbide lamps, long since abandoned as a safety measure in modern mining methods. It is said that the gas ignited from these open lamps, spreading death and havoc in its path.

HINT LAY DISREGARDED

Under the Ohio state law, any mine in which there is even the slightest trace of gas is required to be rock dusted and the entire workings are required to undergo careful inspection each day by a fire boss. It is said that this custom had not been followed in the Sunday Creek mine. Mine Inspector Smith promises a probe into these allegations.

Mine experts say that if the gas had collected in such volume in the old workings as to force a "squeeze" beneath the barricades, the presence of combustible gasses could have been detected easily and an explosion avoided. It is not known whether the mine had been rock dusted recently or not.

DISMISSED! — By Quin Hall

PITTSBURGH AID SAVES 20

ATHENS, O., Nov. 6.—Survivors found in the wrecked Sunday Creek Coal Company mine at Millfield after the fatal explosion which killed 76 or more miners and officials owe their lives to the speed and efficiency of the United States Bureau of Mines experts at Pittsburgh in answering frantic calls for help yesterday.

Ohio state mine safety crews, first on the scene of the disaster, were driven back in their several attempts to reach the entombed men before the arrival of the Pittsburgh crews. Time after time they fought valiantly to get through the dense veil of poisonous afterdamp which was creeping slowly but surely upon the trapped miners. Each time they were forced to turn back when the deadly gas penetrated their inefficient mask protections.

EXPERTS SENT AT ONCE

Two automobiles and rescue car No. 3 were racing against death, meanwhile from Pittsburgh. In the first automobile were Harry Burdelsky, mine foreman, and S. P. Howell, explosives engineer. In the rescue truck just behind were J. J. Forbes, supervising engineer, safety division of the United States Bureau of Mines at Pittsburgh; G. W. Grove and K. L. Marshall, two other mining engineers attached to the Pittsburgh bureau.

The rescue car, attached to a speeding locomotive, meanwhile was being rushed to the scene from California, Pa., where it had been stationed when word of the blast reached Pittsburgh. In charge of the car were Dan Walker, mine foreman, and Ray Morgan, first aid miner.

MAKES RECORD RUN

Arriving in Pittsburgh at 4:30, the car was shifted from the Monongahela division tracks to the Pan-Handle, where a panting locomotive with steam up and crew ready, started a record run into Dennison.

The car was pulled on to a siding under the mine tipple, ready for service at 10:45, almost at the same time as the Bureau of Mines trucks pulled into the mining property, the various experts and safety officials ready to go down into the mine on the instant.

Within an hour, five miners were brought out alive, the first since the blast shook the workings nearly 12 hours before. From then on until this morning the bureau experts worked without a halt, directing the rescue work.

APRON OF WIFE SAVES MINER

MILLFIELD, O., Nov. 6.—(AP.) His wife's apron saved the life of George Rasp, of Jacksonville, one of the trapped workers who escaped death in the Millfield mine disaster.

Rasp said he was blown almost 100 feet from the place where he had been standing by the force of the explosion. He heard a roaring noise and then the shouts of his fellow underground prisoners. He said:

"In my hand, for some reason, was my wife's apron, which I had brought from home to tie around my face because the air has been so bad lately.

"I dipped the apron in some coffee I found in a lunch bucket and tied it across my face. Then I crawled on my hands and feet—it seemed like a mile I crawled—until I came to an air shaft where I was able to get up on a wooden stairway."

John Butsco, of Millfield, who was working about a mile from the explosion section with 30 others, told of shouting a warning and of a race against death. He and his crew and about 60 others escaped, he estimated.

Man With Fractured Skull Locked in Cell as 'Drunk'

Leonard Seiferth, 32, of 106 The Boulevard, Carrick, is in South Side Hospital in a critical condition, said to be due to a skull fracture, after spending 10 hours in the South Side Police Station, where he was taken after being picked up, presumably intoxicated.

Seiferth was found lying beside the steps of St. Paul's Lutheran Church, Sidney and South Eighteenth streets, early yesterday, after the janitor of the church, Gustave Greh, of 55 Windsor road, Brentwood, told police that the man apparently had been there all night.

When Sergt. William Seibert reported at the station at 5 p. m. yesterday, he ordered Seiferth taken to the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Schmidt, living at the same address as Seiferth, were notified of the man's condition, and say they were told at the hospital that the victim was suffering from a skull fracture and alcoholism. Lieut. E. M. Fallon started an investigation of the reported head injury.

TUNNEY HOLDS RICKARD HAD FIRST CLAIM

Dead Promoter Contracted With Him Long Before Mara, Says Ex-Champion

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Gene Tunney resumed the witness stand today in his own defense in the trial of Timothy J. Mara's suit against him for approximately $500,000 and, in a voice that had a trace of Harvard accent, related new "inside" stories of what went on back of the scenes in the boxing business when he was fighting his way up to the heavyweight championship of the world.

Mara claims Tunney owes him the half million for the work he did—and would have done had he not been stopped—in exploiting Tunney into a match with Dempsey for the title.

Mara, a sports promoter, alleges he and Tunney came to a definite verbal agreement as to his "cut" on April 3, 1926.

CLAIMS PRIOR COMPACT

Tunney, from the stand today, sought to show such a deal with Mara was entirely unnecessary for, he testified, the late "Tex" Rickard, famous promoter, already had signed him up to fight Dempsey. This agreemnt, which was read to the jury, was reached on January 20, 1926 according to Tunney.

He testified yesterday that Rickard promised in July, 1925, to make him champion of the world. This was a year before the drawing of the contract which Mara claims he made agreeing to give him 10 per cent of his earnings from the first fight with Jack Dempsey and 25 per cent of what he earned as champion.

QUOTES RICKARD

Tunney quoted Rickard as saying:

"I can make you champion of the world if you will string along with me."

Tunney said he agreed and they shook hands across the table. He added:

"When I left I had a gentleman's agreement with Rickard to fight Dempsey."

He reviewed his career from the time he was a $5-a-week errand boy, boxing evenings for the fun of it, through his war experiences, when as a member of the Marine Corps he became light-heavyweight champion of the A. E. F., until he entered the professional ring and became a contender for the championship.

Lying ill in bed here, the Indian related a streak of ill fortune that has followed him the last few years and announced his intention of seeking the help of a medicine man of his race.

First, said Tom, he had his toe crushed, then his leg broken, and now an illness which the white man's medicine has failed to cure. He said he shortly will visit the medicine man at the Six Nations Reserve at Caledonia, and if he cannot effect a cure he will seek the aid of the greatest of all medicine men on a New York state reserve.

No Sudden Policy Change Ahead, Coolidge Declares

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 6.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The untrammeled elections of a free people are not only the method by which expression is given to a sound and constructive public opinion, but also the means of revealing and thereby relieving internal disorders and discontent. They act as a tonic for the body politic. Under this most wise system our people can register their approval and disapproval in a wholesome, legal way. The political atmosphere becomes cleared.

Calvin Coolidge

It is evident that the same unrest that has been so marked in Europe, Asia and South America has had its counterpart in the United States. Expression has been given to it here in a purely constitutional way without any violence or disorder. This is another demonstration of the strength of our institutions and the attachment of the people to the orderly process of law.

The difficulty is that future action of the national government is uncertain. We shall have to increase our faith. The country will survive. We can be sure of that. What policy it will adopt in legislation will remain unknown until the new Congress meets in December, 1931. But with the same President in office there can be no sudden or violent change.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

is itself a part of the "controlling design?"

For whom, except ourselves who perceive, study, explore and weigh it, has the universe any existence? For no one, surely, unless there be other perceiving minds that include "emotion, morality and esthetic appreciation."

As true as any scientific statement by Jeans is Bishop Berkeley's statement two hundred years ago:

"All the choir of heaven and the furniture of earth, all those bodies which compose the mighty frame of the world, have not any substance without mind."

READ CAREFULLY Sir James' admirable volume, "The Universe Around Us." If you digest and understand it, when you finish you will know about things really important twice as much as you know now.

CHEF, GIRL HELD IN KILLING

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—To jealousy the police attribute the slaying and attempted cremation last night of Alex Adams, kitchen man at the Davis Hotel.

Six persons, one a waitress, were under arrest today and police worked on the theory that the waitress, Miss Bille Sutton, might have been the cause of the killing. Otto Schmitt, chef at the hotel, and the girl, left the city together shortly after discovery of the body, which was found stuffed into the hotel furnace. An iron pipe beside it was believed to have been used to inflict a fracture, found at the base of the victim's skull.

Police said Schmitt, who was arrested when he returned from Lakewood early today, admitted frequent quarrels with Adams. Police said Schmitt had burns on one of his hands.

DRY TEST STIRS HOOVER BOARD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission plunged in earnest today into its task of deciding just what, if anything, should be done about the dry laws.

The date of its final report was still indefinite.

Asked if his hope of a prohibition report to Congress early in December would materialize, Chairman Wickersham said with a smile:

"I won't make any predictions now. I might be wrong."

There were indications today, however, the members are approaching the showdown which is expected to precede the formulation of their report.

DRYS GIVEN HARD BLOW AT POLLS

Prohibition Made Issue in 115 Congress Contests; Enforcement Involved

By THOMAS WRIGLEY.
Universal Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Prohibition was a tottering cause today as almost complete returns revealed the extent of the dry crash in Tuesday's elections.

The political revolution against the dry regime, starting in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts, swept even into Ohio, mother state of the Anti-Saloon League.

Prohibition was a mighty issue, ramifying all the way from gubernatorial elections into 115 out of the 431 congressional districts.

ANTI-DRYS' GAINS

The results were:

1—Referenda against prohibition carried by the three states in which they were placed before the voters—Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Illinois.

2—Gains of five anti-prohibition seats in the United States Senate and at least 30 seats in the House of Representatives.

3—Election of anti-prohibition governors, including such nationally-known figures as Franklin D. Roosevelt, in New York; Philip La Follette, brother of Senator La Follette, in Wisconsin; Albert C. Ritchie in Maryland and Dr. Wilbur Cross, former dean emeritus of Yale University, in Connecticut.

While the results in the referenda propositions and the governorship elections were astounding, the chief significance of the anti-prohibition sweep was in the congressional elections.

ANTIS IN SENATE

Into the Senate at the next session will come such anti-drys as Dwight W. Morrow (Rep.), of New Jersey; Col. J. Hamilton Lewis (Dem.), of Illinois; Robert J. Bulkley (Dem.), of Ohio, and Marcus A. Coolidge (Dem.), of Massachusetts.

In the House, the net gain of 30 anti-prohibition seats was regarded as demonstrating the extent of the revolt against present dry laws.

Methodists Discount Anti-Dry Victories

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The Methodist Church Board of Temperance today said the election turnover was "Democratic rather than wet," adding:

"Despite claims of hopeful wets, the dry majority in the House of Representatives has apparently been reduced only a few votes and the overwhelming dry majority in the Senate not at all."

The board, however, commented that the election showed a lack of efficient organization among the drys in many parts of the country, "a state of affairs which calls for immediate consideration."

Scanning the returns, the board said while the "wet Mr. Bulkley" won the Ohio senatorship, "the dry Mr. White" was chosen Democratic governor. Senator Hastings' defeat of former Senator Bayard in Delaware was described as a dry victory, as was the defeat of Senator Steck, "a mild wet," by Representative Dickinson in Iowa. The statement continued:

"The defeat of Mrs. McCormick and of Mr. Tuttle shows clearly that it is suicide for the Republican party to give aid and comfort to the wet cause in nearly any northern state. The wet referendum victories were in distinctly wet territory."

Taking an opposite view of the significance of election returns, the Federal Dispensary Tax Reduction League, an organization sponsoring a nationwide convention meeting here December 8 to agree on a prohibition modification plan, said today all but 16 of 160 candidates it sponsored were elected.

Woodcock Recalled To Answer Hoover

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—Prohibition Director Amos W. W. Woodcock has been summoned back from his western inspection trip to discuss with Attorney General Mitchell certain data sought by President Hoover concerning prohibition, the Justice Department announced today.

The statement went no further than that relating to the information desired by the President, but it aroused considerable speculation, especially in view of the deliberations of the President's Crime Commission which is studying the prohibition situation.

No further details of the alleged plot were revealed today.

A number of windows were broken during the melee which finally was transferred to the garden of the Palais Bourbon, where Republican guardsmen had to be called to restore order.

The row was a sequel to political polemics which have been carried on between Aymard and Leon Blum, Socialist leader, who also is director of the Socialist newspaper Le Populaire.

WALSH WARNS ON TOW THEFT

Police Supt. P. P. Walsh today took a drastic step to check reported theft of robes and accessories from cars towed to official garages for infraction of parking rules.

Numerous complaints of cars being looted have been received, Walsh said. He declared he would hold inspectors and patrolmen responsible, unless the order was obeyed requiring each patrolman ordering a car towed in to take a complete memorandum of all articles in the machine. Suspension will await any officer who fails to do this, Walsh warned.

STEEL MERGER DEFENSE ENDS

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The defense in Common Pleas Court of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube-Bethlehem Steel merger ended today with an argument by Newton D. Baker, chief of defense counsel.

Baker concluded the arguments for his side. He was followed by Charles F. Smith, one of plaintiff's counsel in the suit brought by the Cyrus S. Eaton interests to enjoin the merger. After another short argument by Harry Crawford, also of plaintiff's counsel, the case will be placed in Judge David Jenkins' hands for decision.

Baker upheld the Youngstown directors as having used "honest" discretion in determining that the terms of the merger were fair and in communicating that judgment to the shareholders.

BRITAIN GIVES ZION ANSWER

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—A vigorous defense by Lord Passfield, British colonial secretary, of the disputed British government "white paper" on Palestine, was published in the London Times today.

It was the first detailed defense made by Lord Passfield since the paper was published two weeks ago.

Declaring the manifesto was in no respect inconsistent with the policies set forth in the Balfour declaration and the mandate, Lord Passfield replied specifically to charges made by Sir John Simon and Viscount Hailsham against the document.

Regarding Jewish immigration, Lord Passfield declared the criticisms were without foundation, and added:

"The intention of the white paper, was to make the possibility of the suspension of Jewish immigration contingent upon unemployment on such a scale as would have a serious effect in preventing the Arab population from obtaining the work necessary for its maintenance. There was, of course, no intention of suggesting that immigration must be suspended as long as 'any Arab' remained without employment."

Cuba Soon to Act On Enlarging Navy

HAVANA, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Congress soon will discuss the advisability of authorizing a $3,000,000 expenditure for reorganization and enlargement of the Cuban navy.

Lewis to Use Nobel Prize To 'Support Young Author'—Himself

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Sinclair (Red) Lewis, the one-time Sauk Center (Minn.) boy, left his Connecticut farm last night and came to town to hear and talk about his winning the Nobel prize in literature for 1930.

He was as nervous as a cat. He said so himself, after being photographed at his publishers' office for the papers and newsreels. He said:

"I feel the highest honor and gratification at being the first American to be awarded the Nobel prize in literature, and I am accepting it with pleasure. I shall use it to support a well-known young American author and his family, and to enable him to continue writing."

The prize is worth $46,350. The "young American author" is Sinclair Lewis himself.

As for his acceptance in the face of his rejection of the Pulitzer prize for "Arrowsmith" in 1926, he explained that:

"The reason is the enormous difference between the two prizes. The Nobel prize is an international prize with no strings tied. It is awarded on the basis of excellence of work.

"The Pulizer prize, on the other hand, is cramped by the provision of Mr. Pulitzer's will that the prize shall be given 'for the American novel published during the year which shall best present the wholesome atmosphere of American life, and the highest standard of American manners and manhood.' This suggests not actual literary merit, but obedience to whatever code of good form may chance to be popular at the moment."

As a result, he said, the Pulitzer prize has been given to some mediocre novels.

NATION HONORS RICKENBACKER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Twelve years after the war, Capt. Edward V. Rickenbacker, America's leading World War ace, came today to the capital to receive the Congressional Medal of Honor.

An elaborate ceremony was prepared to surround presentation of the medal by President Hoover this afternoon before a notable group of fliers. They assembled at Bolling Field, the Army's air base here, to honor the man who was credited with 26 victories in the air on the western front.

F Trubee Davison, assistant secretary of war for aeronautics, was to preside at the ceremony. Maj. Gen. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps, had the privilege of reading the citation which accompanied the congressional award. Former members of the 94th Squadron, which Rickenbacker commanded in France, also shared in the event. Arrangements called for an aerial review and parade of airplane squadrons later.

SCHOOLS MAY ASK DAMAGES

J. Rogers McCreery, solicitor for the Board of Education, is to report to the board on the advisability of bringing suit against the City of Pittsburgh for damages as a result of hasty construction of a street by the former borough of Overbrook. According to James Bonar, building superintendent, the borough of Overbrook, in its haste to empty the treasury before annexation to Pittsburgh, made a new street in the rear of the Fairview School, cutting off the steps and left them hanging in the air.

The question of a damage suit against the city arose during a budget session of the finance and administration committees of the board last night. The members of the committees considered estimates amounting to $23,900 for work next year at the Fairview School, Overbrook, $15,000 of which is for a retaining wall, cement steps and walk.

MESTA CO. HEAD ENDS LIFE

Illness of more than a year today was believed to have prompted Harry F. Wahr, 47, president of the Mesta Machine Company, to end his life in his home, 540 Doyle avenue, West Homestead, late yesterday, the coroner's office reported.

His body, dangling from a door hinge on the first floor, was found by J. R. Berg, of 548 Doyle avenue, general superintendent of the plant, when he visited the house, it was reported. Dr. C. C. Rinard, of Homestead, summoned, pronounced Wahr dead. The plant official used a clothes line for a noose, investigating deputy coroners said.

Wahr, also director of the Monongahela Trust Company, of Homestead; the Employes Association of Pittsburgh, and the Homestead Hospital, was born in Castle Shannon, a son of Anna E. Mesta and Emil G. Wahr. He took the presidency four years ago when his uncle, George Mesta, founder of the Mesta Company, died. Previously he served as vice president and sales manager.

Wahr had been reported in failing health for more than a year. Last September he married Miss Corinne Menk, of Munhall. Besides his widow, he leaves his parents and one sister, Mrs. Hilda Willis, of Detroit. Funeral arrangements were being made today.

MOTHER SUING FOR 2 SONS

Seeking the custody of two sons she alleged were spirited away from a school to which she had sent them, Mrs. Florence McKee Hespenheide, of Elmer street, procured a writ of habeas corpus in Common Pleas Court directed to her former husband, Carl F. Hespenheide, of Irwin avenue, North Side, proprietor of a gasoline station.

Mrs. Hespenheide obtained a divorce in December, 1927, according to the suit, and retained custody of Harry W. Hespenheide, 10, and McKee Hespenheide, 9. She averred she sent them to the Greenbrier Military School, Lewisburg, W. Va., in September, and that last Sunday, through the instrumentality of an older son, William McKee Hespenheide, 12, her former husband had the two other sons taken from school into his custody.

Judge Harry H. Rowand fixed a hearing for tomorrow.

PAYS MAN $2,20 TO KILL WIFE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Emery Ells, confronted with the confession of Benjamin Franklin Brown to the shooting of Mrs. Merle Ells, young divorced wife of Emery, confessed he had offered Brown $2,000, as asserted by Brown, to kill his wife. Police quoted him as saying:

"I wanted custody of my baby."

Mrs. Ells was killed Saturday night by a shotgun charge as she slept beside her 18 months old child. Ells continued:

"I heard that Brown was a killer, so I put him up to it.

"I would have paid him the $2,000 if I had it, but all I had was $2.20, so gave that to him."

Ells, his brother and one other suspect had been held on suspicion since Sunday while detectives tried to unravel the baffling murder. Ells had presented an alibi of having been at work all Saturday night.

Brown, picked up for questioning after one of the suspects casually mentioned his name as an acquaintance, startled the police this morning by making an immediate confession of his alleged part in the slaying.

RABBIT DISEASE NO MENACE

Fear that rabbits are suffering from tularemia, a disease contagious to human beings, was allayed by Dr. John R. Conover, county medical director, today.

Reports of hunters that rabbits in this district seemed sickly and emaciated, with hard lumps as big as eggs under their skins, caused the rumor that tularemia had spread in the district. These are not symptoms of the disease, Dr. Conover said.

If any hunters find rabbits which they fear are infected, Dr. Conover says that a chemist of the Bureau of Foods and Chemistry, Department of Health, in the City-County Building, will be glad to inspect the specimen.

There is no danger of infection to humans if the rabbits are cooked thoroughly before eating, Dr. Conover stated.

Carol's Marital Tangle Halts Coronation

BERLIN, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—Because of his hopeless marital situation, plans for the coronation of King Carol II, of Rumania, have been definitely abandoned, it was stated in reports received here today.

Premier Mironescu has decided that a formal coronation ceremony is not necessary and that the oath of sovereignty Carol has already taken under the constitution is sufficient, the reports said.

The reports declared that a number of royal houses have indicated they would refuse to attend any coronation ceremony because of Carol's marital tangle. Queen Helene steadfastly refuses to consent to a reconciliation, while Carol's reported loyalty to Mme. Lupescu, his former paramour, has formed an insurmountable difficulty.

'Whataman' Shires to Wed In Hollywood Monday

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Nov. 6.—(INS.)—To a beautiful mountainside home he bought for her in Hollywoodland, bordering the film colony, Art "Whataman" Shires, Washington infielder and self-confessed athletic genius, will lead his girl-bride, Betty Greenabaum, of Chicago, Monday.

California law insists that engaged couples wait three days to marry, after filing notice of intention to wed. But it's only 300 miles to Arizona; the Mexican border is only 135 miles away, and, remarked "Whataman:"

"What's a few hundred miles if we are ready?"

As for the girl, Shires declares she is the "sweetest girl in the whole world." Betty is 18, and attended the University of Wisconsin.

The ball player has turned movie actor and is under contract to play the role of "World's Champion" in two pugilistic pictures. It was originally intended for him to be a title contender, but he objected to that. His manager in the picture, Walter Percival, will be best man at "Whataman's" wedding.

Shires' bride-to-be just arrived in Los Angeles yesterday with her mother, Mrs. A. L. Greenabaum.

The newlyweds will defer a honeymoon trip until "Whataman's" movie work is completed. Thereafter they will be found in the East during the summer while Shires plays ball, and in Southern California during the winter, he said.

72,146 PINCHOT COUNTY LEAD

upon which these figures are based.

The Allegheny County headquarters of the Liberal party late yesterday issued a statement refusing to concede the election of Pinchot. The statement follows:

"Charles Dorrance, state-chairman of the Liberal party, does not concede the election of Gifford Pinchot. The vote is extremely close and it will require the official count to determine the result of the election for Governor in the opinion of Mr. Dorrance."

Rural District Returns Boost Pinchot Total

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Figures from isolated rural districts today continued to increase the plurality accorded Gifford Pinchot in his second fight for the governorship of Pennsylvania.

With nearly all the votes tabulated from the cities of Philadelphia, Erie and Reading and other centers of strength of John M. Hemphill, Democratic-Liberal candidate, all hope of Pinchot's opponents faded. Hemphill had wired his congratulations to the victor yesterday.

Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, winner of the senatorial race, had a plurality well beyond the three-quarter of a million mark. In 7,442 districts heard from he had a lead of 804,301 over Sedgwick Kistler, his Democratic opponent. The total vote stood: Davis, 1,276,436; Kistler, 472,135.

The Republican party lost three seats in Congress, according to the unofficial returns, the Eleventh, Fourteenth and Twenty-second. In the State Senate the Republicans gained two seats, but four were lost in the State House of Representatives.

Hemphill carried every ward in the city of Philadelphia. The total plurality of Hemphill in Philadelphia County approximated 225,000. Only in South Philadelphia did Hemphill fail to poll the vote that had been expected. A plurality of 100,000 had been claimed for Hemphill in South Philadelphia, but only 60,000 was delivered.

In all, Hemphill carried eight counties—Berks, Erie, Lehigh, Monroe, Montgomery, Montour, Northampton and Philadelphia. The remaining 59 went to Pinchot.

Lackawanna, in which the third city of the state is located, Scranton, was almost a standoff with Pinchot carrying it by 3,801.

Dauphin County, seat of the state government, turned in a 25,000 plurality for Pinchot.

Pinchot Holds 79,000 Lead With Only 52 Districts Missing

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—With only 52 districts missing out of the 8,321 in the state, Gifford Pinchot, Republican, had a lead of 79,661 over John M. Hemphill, his Democratic-Liberal party opponent for the governorship.

The total vote for 8,269 districts was: Pinchot, 1,066,780; Hemphill, 987,119.

College Grid Star Wins Nebraska House Seat

OMAHA, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The next session of the Nebraska Legislature is apt to hear a few stirring college yells from the gallery when Representative Rudolph Tesar is seated.

For Tesar, who yesterday was elected to the House of Representatives from an Omaha district, is co-captain and star tackle of the Creighton University football team. He is a Democrat and an attorney, having been admitted to the Nebraska bar several months ago, although he has not yet received his diploma from Creighton.

ELECTION FIGHT CASE DROPPED

John P. Kennedy, plainclothes patrolman at the Oakland Station, accused of attacking Anthony McGinley, of Ethel street, member of the election board of the Fifteenth District, Fourth Ward, and ejecting him from the polls election day, was discharged by Judge Harry H. Rowand in Common Pleas Court yesterday.

The hearing had been continued from Tuesday and the charge was dismissed when McGinley failed to appear. Donald Anderson, attorney for the Liberal party, stated he had not seen nor heard from McGinley since the previous hearing.

McGinley appeared in court Tuesday and testified that he had detected a clerk of the board erasing check marks from the registration lists and that he was uttering a caution to the clerk when Kennedy appeared and forced him from the polls, tearing his shirt and threatening to kill him if he returned. McGinley said he had been placed on the board by Coleman Coyne, brother of State Senator James J. Coyne.

Kennedy declared he had been summoned to the polls on complaints that McGinley was under the influence of liquor and was disorderly and using abusive language in front of the polls. He said he merely ordered him away. The polling place was located at 52 Bates street.

fluence in state and national Republican circles.

2—Increased the stature of Secretary of Labor and Senator-elect James J. Davis, due to his amazing vote-getting strength in every corner of the state and his friendly accord with all the ruling powers.

3—Weakened the influence of the Mellons in Pennsylvania politics.

4—Endangered the ambition of Senator David A. Reed to serve another term in the Senate, since Reed must make peace between the warring Philadelphia and Pittsburgh organizations by 1934 or go down to defeat.

5—Drove W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad and former Republican national committeeman, almost into the "outer darkness" as a figure in Pennsylvania politics.

PROVOKE DEBATE

All these developments naturally provoke debate, but there is no doubt Pinchot can make it interesting for President Hoover in 1932.

The Governor-elect, first, will have the crafty advice and warm support of "Uncle Joe" Grundy, who has no love for the President.

He also will gather to his banner all the western insurgents and a great number of dry leaders from all states.

He will go to the next Republican convention controlling 40 delegates and possibly 100—not enough to nominate himself without help from other states, but sufficient to worry the President over the prohibition, water-power and public utilities issues and an ever-threatening third party ticket.

Grundy will have Pinchot's ear at Harrisburg for four years, will get a host of appointments in the state administration and will advise the governor-elect in the choice of a new Republican national committeeman. He will also have something to say at the next national convention.

PINCHOT TAKES REST

Meanwhile Governor-elect and Mrs. Pinchot and P. S. Stahlnecker, manager of Pinchot's gubernatorial campaign, have dropped out of sight for the next week or 10 days. Before leaving, Pinchot said:

"We have been constantly on the firing line since last March, and plan to take a rest now whether we need it or not. We are going to lay off for a week and let the world roll on without us."

HEMPHILL STILL FIGHTS DRY LAW

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—John M. Hemphill plans to continue the fight he made in the recent gubernatorial contest, only this time his efforts will be part of the campaign to send an anti-dry Democratic president to Washington in 1932.

He said:

"We shall operate consistently on the basis of our 1930 platform."

He announced that, in keeping with a promise made to Thomas L. Hoskins, chairman of the Democratic committee in Chester County, he will again take up his duties as county chairman. Mr. Hoskins has been chairman since the start of the state campaign. Hemphill said:

"I will work with Sedgwick Kistler, my running mate for the United States Senate, and with John R. Collins, our state chairman. We shall keep the Democratic state headquarters in Harrisburg open and functioning."

VITALITY IS LOW AMONG WORKERS AT FOUR O'CLOCK

Fatigue During This Zero Hour Can be Overcome by Sugar

Finishing the day's work "dead tired" is neither wise nor necessary. Everybody knows that a fatigued system is readily susceptible to the common ills. To maintain vitality during the last half of the day is therefore essential, not only for the sake of health but efficient work.

One of the simplest ways to combat fatigue is eating a food or drinking a beverage that contains refined sugar. Candy, ice cream, cookies and cakes are ideal in this respect. Best of all, they can be bought readily and cheaply everywhere.

Medical men have made many experiments with workers and sugar ...ls in mid-afternoon and have ...d the results most satisfactory. ... sugar quickly nourishes the ...y without taxing the digestive ...tem. When the body is nourished this way, fatigue disappears.

Such sweet snacks as those previously mentioned can be kept in ...e's desk and eaten while at work. For a sweet beverage, a glass of water containing sugar — the "athlete's cocktail" — is most invigorating. Many famous athletes drink this prior to a hard game. Most foods are more delicious with refined sugar. The Sugar Institute.

DEADLOCK ON CONGRESS CONTROL

Democrats and Republicans Running Neck-and-Neck; Late Returns to Decide

Blind Senator Schall, Republican, the Senate now appears:
Democrats—48.
Republicans—47 (if Schall wins).
Farmer-Labor—1.
The House situation was a complete piece to the Senate.

HOUSE LINEUP

On the basis of returns to noon, the House appears:
Republicans—215.
Democrats—215.
Farmer-Labor—1.
Doubtful—4.

Whichever party captures three of the four doubtful districts will be able to organize the House. The missing districts are located in Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky and Minnesota. In all them the issue is so close that it probably will require an official recount to decide it. That may take weeks.

In Illinois, Kentucky and Indiana the question is between Democrats and Republicans in the missing districts. In Minnesota it is between Republican and Farmer-Labor candidates. Thus, it appeared the Democrats would have to take all three contests in the three aforementioned states in order to have a clear majority—unless for organization purposes the Farmer-Labor "party" throws its strength to them.

HOOVER LOSES CONTROL

Whatever the ultimate outcome—and it may not be officially established for some time—the closeness of the figures demonstrates the complete loss of control of the Seventy-second Congress by the administration.

Both houses will be dominated by a coalition of Democrats and western insurgent Republicans whenever they care to combine for it. In the Senate, they have combined pretty frequently during the past four years to the confusion and consternation of the White House.

The Farmer-Labor party, all but extinct, with one member of the Senate, and one or possibly two in the House, promises to occupy a unique position in the next Congress. On a strict party division, that "party's" vote may be the determining factor on any given question.

Certainly nothing like this situation was ever seen in the long history of partisan fighting for control of Congress. The Republicans and Democrats have run almost a dead heat, with future developments probably determining which of the two parties will be able to organize the Congress.

Democratic Lead Mounts In Kentucky

LOUISVILLE, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Indications that Kentucky would have nine Democrats among its 11 members of the House approached almost a certainty today as returns continued to be tabulated in Tuesday's election.

Judge M. M. Logan, long term, and Ben Williamson, short term, Democratic senatorial candidates, slowly increased their leads over the Republican incumbent, John M. Robsion, seeking both terms, until they ranged around 31,000.

Rural Vote Gives Schall Small Lead

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—A sustained rural rally of ballots today gave Thomas D. Schall, Republican incumbent, the lead for United States senator from Minnesota over Einar Hoidale, Democrat. It was the first time since tabulating of Tuesday's poll began that the blind senator had an advantage. There were still 394 precincts missing, all in rural regions.

With only rural precincts remaining to be heard from, all strongholds of Schall support, there appeared little doubt that he blind Republican would end the long nip and tuck battle with victory by a small plurality.

Schall's lead when 3,311 precincts of 3,705 had been accounted for gave him a lead of 305 votes, his total being 263,824 to Hoidale's 263,519.

Shipstead Silent On Senate Poll

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Senator Shipstead, Farmer-Labor, who may be the controlling factor in the organization of the new Congress, today refused to indicate his attitude.

Shipstead said he regarded the election as an indication that the "people evidently did not like the way things are being run."

Convicted Official's Wife Wins His Office

WALLACE, Idaho, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—One of two women who sought offices vacated when their husbands were convicted in the so-called "Wallace rum rebellion" apparently has won her campaign of "vindication."

Mrs. W. H. Herrick, whose husband was assessor of Shoshone County, led by a large margin in Tuesday's election. Mrs. R. E. Weniger, wife of the convicted county sheriff, apparently was beaten.

Judge Lyle, Nemesis Of Gangsters, Wins

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Judge John H. Lyle, of the Municipal Court, much publicized because of his campaign against gang leaders, was one of few Republicans who withstood the landslide of Democratic ballots in Tuesday's election. He won, despite the fact the Chicago Bar Association had considered him as "not of judicial temperament."

Women Win Draw In Joust With Lie Machine

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—A debate between the lie-detecting machine and two women remained a stale-mate, more or less, today. Miss Flossie Black and Mrs. Lola Gregory, of Itasca, Ill., were taken to Northwestern University bureau of crimes' apparatus. Police suspected they had harbored Earl Brandon, sought for the slaying of Joseph Carney last September.

"No," they answered when questioned if they had protected Brandon.

"The machine says you are lying," the operator explained.

"Well, we are not," one of the women replied.

"But the machine—"

"It probably isn't working today," they returned.

They were held anyway.

LONG TO STAY ON STATE JOB

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Gov. Huey P. Long reiterated his intentions to hold the office of governor of Louisiana until his term expires in May, 1932, before taking the oath of United States senator as successor to Senator Joseph E. Ransdell.

Told that Democratic leaders were planning to urge him to come to Washington on next March 4 if the results of the election should make a close division between Republicans and Democrats in the Senate, Gov. Long said he did not believe that would be necessary as some of his Republican friends would agree to a pair. He said:

"My work for unbuilding Louisiana—eradicating its illiteracy, reviving our domestic and foreign commerce, paving our highways, restoring the finances of our cities, together with the work I am helping to do for the Mississippi Valley states, is worth more to the nation until May, 1932, than anything I might do in the United States Senate until that time.

"By reason of this fact, some of my friends in the United States Senate on the Republican side, will, I am sure, accord me the right of a pair, at least on the vote to organize the Senate, until May, 1932."

BRYAN WINNER IN NEBRASKA

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The name of Bryan, long potent in the politics of Nebraska and the nation's democracy, shone with some of its old lustre today in the apparent victory of Charles W. Bryan in the governorship race.

Returns from 1915 of the 2,040 precincts of the state gave Bryan, a former governor and the Democratic vice presidential nominee in 1924, a 7,000 lead over Gov. Arthur Weaver, his Republican opponent. The vote was: Bryan, 207,572, and Weaver, 200,222. Bryan is a brother of the late William Jennings Bryan.

Except in the gubernatorial contest, the Republican state ticket was successful by a wide margin in Tuesday's election which also returned to the Senate George W. Norris. At the same time Nebraska sent four Democrats and two Republicans to Congress.

DEMOCRATS SEE VICTORY SLAP AT HOOVER

'Administration Rebuked for Deficiencies,' Foes State; G. O. P. Belittles Gains

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—From diametrically-opposed viewpoints Republican and Democratic spokesmen sized up the election today while its final results still were in doubt.

The Democrats termed the drive that took them at least to the verge of control in both Senate and House a clean-cut victory on the issue of "failure of the administration to meet its responsibility."

They carried enthusiasm into an optimistic consideration of their chances at capturing the presidency in 1932.

The Republican commanders, on the contrary, held the Democratic gains not surprising on the basis of two factors: Their own encroachments it, 1928 on normally Democratic territory, and the current business depression. They refused to see in the vote any popular rebuke to the administration.

"G. O. P. VINDICATION"

Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican National Committee, went further, asserting that "everything considered, the result must be taken as a vindication of the national administration."

Chairman Fess, of the Republican National Committee, said no outstanding issues controlled the results, which he viewed as a "crazy quilt." It was to be expected, he added, that the Republicans would lose 35 seats even without the disturbance caused by the economic depression.

ASSURANCE ON TARIFF

John J. Raskob, Democratic national chairman, termed the Democratic sweep a "notable victory on clean-cut political issues." He announced he would do everything in his power to have the Democratic party view the tariff as an economic rather than a political question, "thus removing from business minds all cause for alarm and uncertainty as to how business will be treated in the event yesterday's election and future elections give control of Congress to our party."

He asserted "fair trade, not free trade," was his party's aim.

Alfred E. Smith, the 1928 Democratic standard-bearer, said:

"The people have responded to a truthful and direct presentation of the issues."

Outlining his reason for considering the election result a vindication, Lucas said no administration ever had gone into a congressional election under such adverse conditions. The results, he added, were "convincing evidence of the abiding faith of the thinking people of the country in the leadership of Herbert Hoover."

Chairman Fess said:

"Viewing yesterday's election as a whole, there is an apparent absence of the general effect of any outstanding national issue. It is obvious that prohibition cut both ways across the party lines, but while forming a controlling factor in some instances, it developed no national trend. The tariff may have had its effect in isolated sections, but certainly it was not a dominating issue in a national sense."

"Healthy babies get life's best breaks," say experts

THE first few years of the child's life—those are the important formative years when his physique (as well as his habits) gets "set." Those are the years when you want to protect his health in every way. Have a doctor look after him regularly.

And in between times, no matter how healthy he appears, be prepared for little emergencies. "Vaseline" Petroleum Jelly will be a big help. It is the approved first aid for chafed skin, sunburn, minor cuts, scalds, burns and bruises.

Use it in baby's regular bath routine, too. After you dry him apply a little to prevent chapping. His nostrils should be gently cleaned with sterile cotton swabs dipped in "Vaseline" Petroleum Jelly.

A separate supply of "Vaseline" Jelly should be kept for the baby, ready for instant application. Sold everywhere in tubes and bottles. And remember when you buy that the trademark Vaseline on the label is your assurance that you are getting the genuine product of the Chesebrough Manufacturing Co., Cons'd. 17 State Street, New York.

BOAT SEIZURE PROTESTED

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—A complaint against the Coast Guard for seizure of the motor boat Mazel-Tov was lodged by her captain, Frank R. Cook, with Henry D. C. Dubois, British vice consul for Rhode Island.

Capt. Cook, who is under bail with eight of the Mazel-Tov's crew for hearing on charges of conspiring to smuggle liquor into the United States, presented a written statement to the vice consul alleging that his vessel was seized last Saturday outside the 12-mile limit and he and his crew were held incommunicado for 51 hours before arraignment. All of the crew claim to be Canadian subjects.

Dubois, Capt. Cook and Joseph E. Fitzpatrick, counsel for the crew, said they intended to press the complaint before E. M. Gray, British consul general at Boston.

CAPONE LEADER PROVIDES BOND

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—Frank Rio, who served a jail term in Philadelphia with his chief, "Scarface Al" Capone, for gunotting, was free under $10,000 bond today, following his recent arrest on a "public enemy" vagrancy warrant.

Rio will be arraigned tomorrow before Municipal Judge John H. Lyle, who has issued the numerous vagrancy warrants with which Chicago is harassing its racketeers and gangsters.

Thirteen men, including three politicians, were in the apartment in which Rio was arrested. Five revolvers were found on top of a piano. No one claimed them. When raiders entered the apartment, the occupants were listening to election returns over the radio.

HUNT ELECTION DAY KIDNAPERS

KANSAS CITY, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—W. L. Vandeventer, United States district attorney, has requested reinforcements in the federal government's hunt for the election day abductors of Rex V. Hedrick, chairman of the Jackson County election board.

Hedrick was recovering at his home in Buckner, Mo., from a severe beating suffered at the hands of gunmen who kidnaped him election morning near his home and held him captive throughout election day.

A notebook in which Hedrick, a Republican, had written data concerning the Jackson County election situation which brought federal indictment of four election judges here was reported stolen by the kidnapers.

U.S. FLIER HELD, CHILE QUIZZED

SANTIAGO DE CHILE, Nov. 6 (AP.)—Ambassador William S. Culbertson today sought an explanation from Chilean authorities of the detention of Capt. Albert W. Stevens, aerial photographer for the National Geographic Society, as he was about to leave Chile yesterday.

The ambassador said his complaint was not against the Chilean government, but against Col. Merino, head of the army aviation, who was understood to have ordered the arrest.

Capt. Stevens was detained for three hours, being released after Ambassador Culbertson had interceded in his behalf.

The American flier, who had been detached for several months from active duty to aid the Geographic Society in an aerial survey in South America, arrived here October 21 from the Argentine and since has spent some time in making photographs of the Antilles, always riding in military planes piloted by Chilean aviators. He was understood to have refused to submit the photographs to Col. Merino.

Seven Helps In One For Difficult Coughs From Colds

Creomulsion is a better help than some coughs need. It combines seven major helps in one, to do the best that men know for any cough from colds.

There is creosote—the world's supreme help—blended, emulsified and palatable. There are white pine tar, wild cherry bark, menthol, ipecac, etc. Each is best for a certain type of cough. But even doctors might disagree on what is best for yours.

So experts have combined in Creomulsion all major helps in one. This to deal with all conditions in a most effective way. No narcotic in it.

Creomulsion is for people who wish to do the utmost. In coughs from colds that hang on it is essential. One dare not trust such coughs to any lesser help. But don't you think that any cough calls for the best help known?

Creomulsion costs a little more than some helps—$1.25. But your druggist guarantees it. So it costs you nothing if you think it fails to render help that is quick and complete. Careful people, more and more, demand this maximum protection. Use it promptly.

FIGHT ON MOTOR LINE DROPPED

W. D. Rubright, of Butler, who yesterday appeared before Examiner W. E. Best, of the Public Service Commission, and asked permission to establish a motor freight service between that city and Pittsburgh, was opposed by the Pennsylvania Railroad. The Harmony route withdrew objections when Rubright agreed he would not accept package freight for delivery in that road's territory.

His application for permission to act as a common carrier calls for right to do business in Wexford, Zelienople, Harmony, Portersville, Harlansburg, Leesburg, Mercer, Greenville, Adamsville, Hartstown, Conneaut Lake, Meadville, Saegertown, Venango, Cambridge Springs and Waterford.

HOSPITAL HEAD STRICKEN, DIES

Miss Olive May McWilliams, superintendent of the Canonsburg General Hospital at Canonsburg, Pa., died at the hospital last night after a heart attack. Her home was at 119 South Fremont avenue, Bellevue. Miss McWilliams had been superintendent of the Canonsburg hospital for more than three years, going there from the Monongahela Memorial Hospital, at Monongahela, Pa., where she had been superintendent for nine years.

Miss McWilliams received her training at the Presbyterian Hospital, North Side, and was superintendent of the operating room and night superintendent at the Presbyterian Hospital for several years. She later went to the Ohio Valley Hospital, the Allegheny Valley Hospital, the Windber Hospital at Windber, and the Suburban General Hospital in Bellevue.

She leaves her mother, Mrs. J. J. McWilliams, and a sister, Mrs. I. N. Pollock, both of the Bellevue address, and three brothers, Wade L. and D. Leroy McWilliams, of Bellevue, and Earl L. McWilliams, of Crafton.

AUTOIST FINED IN POLICE ROW

Samuel Abbott, 29, of 5148 McClure avenue, was fined $25 or 30 days in jail today by Magistrate Ray Schneider in North Side Police Court on a suspicious person charge.

Patrolman Casimir Nometz testified Abbott drove his auto into a trunk in McClure avenue and failed to stop. Nometz caught Abbott who, the officer said, refused to show driver's credentials.

The policeman said he stepped on the running board of Abbott's car and ordered him to drive to Woods Run Police Station. Instead, the driver drove onto a sidewalk and tried to crush him against a building, Nometz said, and when he jumped from the car to save himself Abbott drove away. Nometz arrested Abbott later.

Ethiopian 'John D.' Passes Dimes To Children

ADDIS ABABA, Abyssinia, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Emperor Haile Selassie I has emulated John D. Rockefeller and distributed dimes among all children within his call.

Thousands of youngsters, both white and black, some of them half naked, ran eagerly toward the throne when they learned that coins were to be passed out by "Lord King of Kings of Ethiopia, Conquering Lion of the Tribe of Juda, the Elect of God and the Light of the World." Many prostrated themselves in the presence of the emperor, who was crowned three days ago.

TAXI CRUISING DISCUSSED

Plans for better handling of taxicab traffic on downtown streets, especially in William Penn way, were discussed by members of the Better Traffic Committee and officials of the Parmelee Transportation Company, owners of the Yellow and Green cabs, in the William Penn Hotel yesterday.

H. B. Kirkpatrick, chairman of the traffic flow group of the committee, presided.

City Traffic Engineer Lewis W. McIntyre reported that 437 out of 450 cabs, or 97.1 per cent, entered William Penn way empty between 2 and 6 p. m., during a count November 3. Of this number, 96 passed the point more than once empty, and one passed 18 times, the maximum amount of cruising noted by the observers. The count was made only at Oliver avenue and William Penn way.

BONDS ASSURE TUBE CITY PARK

With the approval of a $140,000 bond issue by voters of McKeesport, that city today was assured a new public park—and the last wish of the late Frederick C. Renziehausen was assured of fulfillment.

When Mr. Renziehausen, operator of the Large Distilling Company, died in June, his will revealed a $100,000 fund for a playground in the congested districts of Pittsburgh and a $50,000 bequest to the city of McKeesport for a public park.

But the McKeesport bequest was penciled in by Mr. Renziehausen after the document had been drawn up, and the courts ruled that it was thus invalidated. However, Mr. Renziehausen's brother, Henry H. Renziehausen, McKeesport merchant, turned over to the city of McKeesport $50,000, with which to build the park, which will include a swimming pool.

This gift seemed to be just the impetus needed to carry the bond issue to success at the election Tuesday.

Is Your Fortune Safe?

FORTUNES amassed after long struggle often melt away quickly.

Eagerness to build them faster or the inexperience and lack of ability of those who succeed to them usually bring disaster.

It is a familiar story in every community.

Wise business men and women today are making safety certain by creating living trusts for themselves and those they seek to protect.

They are appointing strong institutions like The Union Trust Company of Pittsburgh as Executors and Trustees, confident that their estates will be conserved.

111TH REUNION OPENS SUNDAY

War veterans from many states, but mostly from the tri-state district, will be in Pittsburgh Sunday for the three-day reunion of the One Hundred and Eleventh Infantry.

The first day will be given over to a business session, including the election of officers and registration. Sunday night's program calls for a "family affair" in charge of the ladies' auxiliary of the regiment. There will be motion pictures and other entertainment. Both meetings will be held in the One Hundred and Seventy-sixth Field Artillery Armory in Oakland.

The annual banquet will be held in the Fort Pitt Hotel Monday night, in charge of Harry J. Campbell and George V. Murray. Mayor Charles H. Kline, Gen. C. H. Muir, Gen. A. J. Logan, Joseph G. Armstrong, county commissioner, and Congressman Clyde Kelly are on the speakers' list.

Tuesday the veterans will join in the Armistice Day parade and a dance in the armory at night will end the reunion.

HUSBAND ASKS $25,000 BALM

Charging alienation of the affections of his wife, resulting in a divorce, Charles B. Williams, of 314 Center avenue, Verona, filed a suit against Fred W. Coleman, Jr., of 913 Murtland avenue, in Common Pleas Court, asking $25,000 damages.

Williams averred he married Dorothy F. Anderson in 1922, that she later became acquainted with Coleman and met him clandestinely on many occasions. Coleman took Mrs. Williams on trips to other cities and wrote her letters, according to the suit, filed by Attorney J. Thomas Hoffman.

As a result she became dissatisfied with her married life and left Williams in August, 1927, obtaining a divorce November 22, 1929, the suit alleged.

'HELPING HAND' VOTED FUNDS

An ordinance appropriating $5,000 to the Helping Hand Association, which is maintaining a home and serving meals to unemployed men in a building near First avenue and Water street, was unanimously approved by Council yesterday at a special meeting. The money is to come from the $100,000 fund for relief work.

Yesterday 125 additional applications for aid were received at the Department of Public Welfare. B. L. Succop, director of supplies, plans to open bids for food and clothing supplies today, temporary arrangements having been in effect since the distribution of the fund was begun.

Best Remedy for Cough Is Easily Mixed at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It is also absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. At the same time, it promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs which follow cold epidemics.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for severe coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

RULES

Proper nouns, slang and words that offend good taste cannot be used. SCORING: The first and last letters of each word do not count as strokes. A longer or shorter word can be substituted, but at a penalty. If a longer word is used, each letter above par counts as a stroke; if a shorter word is used, each letter below par counts as a stroke. If player cannot insert a suitable word, add 3 strokes to par for hole and proceed to next hole.

The solution to this puzzle can be found on page 19.

Special Correspondent Aboard the DO-X for the Trans-Atlantic Flight.
Special Cable Dispatch.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 6.—With a roar like a thousand demons from its 12 motors, the huge flying boat DO-X swept the canals, windmills and rain-soaked Holland flats and glided to the surface of the Zuider Zee opposite the Dutch seaplane station at Shellingwoude at 4:25 p. m. (11:25 a. m. E. S. T.).

15 MAKE TRIP

It was the end of the first stage of the DO-X's projected trans-Atlantic flight, and was a success in every respect. From Altenrhein, Switzerland, via Basle and Cologne to Amsterdam, the DO-X made the good time of 5 hours 35 minutes. The motors were revved up to 2,150 revolutions a minute, and a speed of 103 miles an hour was reached.

Fifteen persons were aboard as Germany's latest mechanical air wonder roared along more than 1,000 feet above the historic Rhine, with its Lorelei maidens and ancient, ruined castles climbing the heights. Tens of thousands of Germans on both sides of the river cheered and waved with the wildest enthusiasm. Not since President Von Hindenburg's visit to the provinces has there been such a turnout along the historic river.

Immediately after the double bank of propellers stopped, a naval motor boat took the line from the bow and towed the great flying-ship to a buoy near the seaplane hangar.

DUTCH WELCOME FLIERS

Admirals Quant and Gear, chiefs of the marine staff, boarded the DO-X and welcomed the officers and crew in the name of the Dutch government and the city of Amsterdam, and congratulated Capt. Christiansen on his historic flight with the world's largest heavier-than-air craft. Capt. Christiansen told me as I boarded the DO-X:

"It has been, indeed, a successful flight so far, and the ship's performance has strengthened the confidence we already had. We had some rain squalls, and occasionally spots of poor visibility, but on the whole, it wasn't bad weather."

The two pilots, Capt. Horst Merz and Lieut. Charles H. Schildhauer, an American ex-Navy man, were all smiles. They alternated at the controls on the first leg, Schildhauer said, continuing:

"I thoroughly enjoyed every mile, and I know we are all looking forward to the Atlantic part of the trip. What a great boat this is!"

ENGINES RUN SMOOTHLY

Harvey Brewton, chief engineer, and Joseph Cody, representative of the Curtiss-Wright people, both Americans, were most happy over the performance of the 12 Curtiss Conqueror engines, which are under their special care. Brewton declared:

"They ran as smooth as velvet feels, the entire distance, and could have kept up their song the whole night, and longer."

LADY HAY LOST

Lady Drummond Hay, who flew from London through bad weather yesterday in her fast British Puss-Moth plane, took off from Amsterdam this forenoon, intending greet the DO-X from the air. She is to be the only woman passenger crossing the Atlantic on the DO-X.

But she got lost in the fog and clouds and was forced down in a field to orientate herself, only to discover that she was on the frontier of Luxembourg. She took off immediately and returned to Cologne an hour after the DO-X had passed over that city.

Dr. Claude Dornier, designer and builder of the DO-X, is happy over the success of the ship's first flight. When he arrived by train in Berlin I telephoned him, and he declared, rejoicingly:

"If the most careful preparation and care can insure success in anything, then the entire DO-X flight must be a grand achievement."

A large reception to which hundreds of officials were invited will be given by Amsterdam Elders today in honor of Capt. Christiansen and the crew. The crew came to town last night with the exception of First Pilot Merz, who stuck to the ship, sleeping aboard.

Nature Carves 'K,' Owner's Initial, On Potato

TIFFIN, O.—(INS.)—A massive potato, branded by nature with the initial of its owner, was found recently by Thomas Knight while digging on his farm near here.

Except for a letter "K" three inches high, the tuber, weighing 2¼ pounds, was perfect. It measured 19 inches in circumference at its longest axis and 14 inches around the opposite direction.

If This Fails To Knock Your Cold In a Few Hours

Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

HILL'S Cascara Quinine is GUARANTEED to knock a cold in a jiffy. To relieve the pain, to break up tightness. If it fails, you pay nothing.

This guarantee is made to prove to those who have tried fifty ways to lose a cold, that the surest way is to go back to the first principles and use something that you KNOW does the work. Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. You'll feel like a new person almost before you know it. Pain eased, congestion broken, your mind cleared and yourself ready to go back on the job with a wallop.

That's because Hill's is a scientific formula made to DO ONE THING WELL: to knock colds in a hurry—not to cure a score of different troubles.

Costs only a few cents at any drug store. Get package now. Your money back if fails. Try it—you'll be glad that you did.

HILL'S Cascara Quinine Compound

It will pay you to read what the dentists said

IN ORDER to help clarify the conflicting theories about the proper care of teeth and gums and the choice of dentifrices, E. R. Squibb & Sons asked a leading research institution to conduct an investigation on the subject among 50,000 practicing dentists. Here is the summary of the replies received:

95% of the answers stated that germ acids most frequently cause tooth decay and gum irritation. . . .

95% of the answers agreed that the most serious trouble occurs at the place where teeth and gums meet—The Danger Line. . . .

85% stated that the best product to prevent these acids from causing decay and irritating the gums is Milk of Magnesia. . . .

These three authoritative answers are a strong tribute to Squibb Dental Cream, which is made with more than 50% Squibb Milk of Magnesia.

Try Squibb's. It cleans beautifully. Thoroughly refreshes your mouth. And it is so safe. Contains no grit, no astringents, nothing which might injure teeth or gums.

Lee as members of his staff for the parade Tuesday.

Members of the 324th Army Squadron, 99th Reserve Division, from Rodgers Field will fly pursuit planes while the parade is in progress, and a 21-gun salute will be fired by veterans of the 107th Field Artillery from Monument Hill, North Side, at 11 o'clock. The parade will halt at one minute to 11, and buglers will sound "Taps" in memory of the World War dead.

WOMEN ROBBED OF CASH, GEMS

Two men robbed Mrs. Genva Kirby, of 118 Madeline street, Carrick, of her purse, containing $13, after threatening her if she made an outcry. The pair accosted Mrs. Kirby while she was walking in Pressley street, near Madison avenue, last night.

A purse belonging to Mrs. E. F. Kelly, 2711 Murray avenue, and containing three diamond rings valued at $500, a wrist watch valued at $125 and $9 in cash, was stolen from that address last night, police reported.

Two Negroes attacked Emerson Kennedy, of 6 Kansas street, at Logan and Colwell streets, last night, and robbed him of $35, he reported to police.

Diamond earrings valued at $300 were stolen from the home of Mrs. Mary Miller, of 252 South St. Clair street, according to a report to police today.

FLAMES ROUT 2 FAMILIES

Members of two Negro families were forced from their home early today when flames swept a three-story frame dwelling at 1527 Magnolia street, North Side. Those forced out were members of the family of Chris Williams, who occupy the first floor, and those of John Brown, on the second floor.

The flames originated in the rear of the second floor and spread to the first and third. The flames also damaged the rear of the home of Tre Flinner at 1719 Franklin street. The police report estimates the damage to the Magnolia street residence at $4,000 and to the Flinner home $300.

2 CARS, STORES LOOTED

Charles Eckels, of 610 Smithfield street, an employe of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, reported to police that a chronometer, valued at $25, was stolen from a suitcase in his machine parked in Smithfield street, today.

Thieves entered the P. H. Butler store, 3801 Penn avenue, through a front vestibule window and took $16 worth of cigarets, the manager informed police.

A purse and silverware, of undetermined value, were taken from the Alberta Drug Company's store, 600 Larimer avenue.

E. Stym, of Williamsville, N. Y., reported that while his car was parked in Grant street, near Seventh avenue, a suitcase containing sample dresses, valued at $50, was stolen.

NOW, HE ENJOYS FOODS THAT USED TO DISAGREE

"For over five years it seemed like everything I enjoyed eating would disagree with me," says Charles L. Garman, 5438 Irving St., Philadelphia. I suffered from headaches; was nervous; couldn't sleep right.

"I tried a lot of things for indigestion, but nothing really helped until my doctor started me on Pape's Diapepsin. I have used five packages and have gained five pounds. I eat anything—fried things, hot cakes; foods that used to disagree. I seldom feel the least discomfort nowadays, but when I do I just take a tablet of Pape's Diapepsin and in a moment my stomach is all right."

When thousands like Mr. Garman are coming right out in public to praise Pape's Diapepsin, there seems no reason to doubt that it does what as claimed for it to help people who suffer from acid-dyspepsia, and the heartburn, gas, nausea, belching, headaches, dizziness, etc., caused by this common ailment. But those who wish further proof before buying may easily have it. The makers agree to send anyone a trial package absolutely FREE. Just write "Pape's Diapepsin," Wheeling, W. Va.

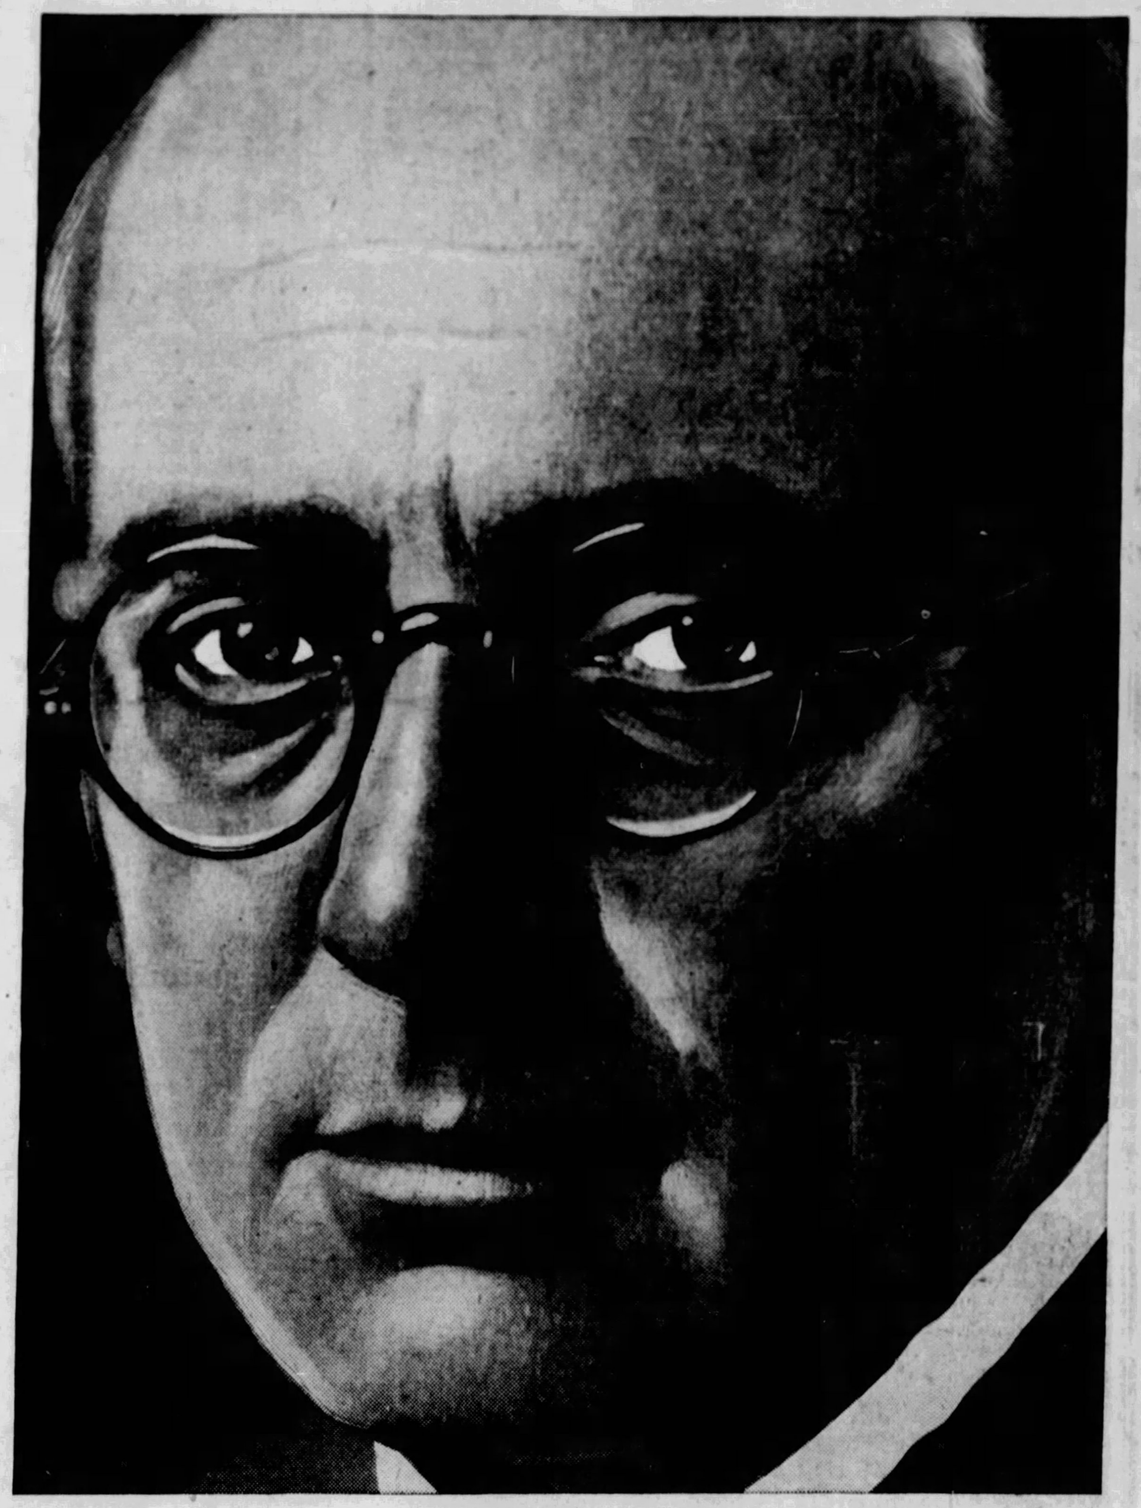
"THE GREATEST MEASURE OF SERVICE"

Says

WILLIAM M. GREVE

Vice-Chairman of the Prudence Company, Incorporated

"Security for the future—that to my mind is the most fundamental consideration that confronts industry today. The companies that give the public the greatest measure of service and value today are the companies that will achieve the greatest success tomorrow. Your use of the Ultra Violet Ray in the 'Toasting' of the LUCKY STRIKE tobaccos shows that you have recognized this determining factor. You have risen gloriously to the occasion of controlling the forces of progress in your industry."



Consistent with its policy of laying the facts before the public, The American Tobacco Company has invited Mr. William M. Greve to review the reports of the distinguished men who have witnessed LUCKY STRIKE'S famous Toasting Process. The statement of Mr. Greve appears on this page.

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why TOASTING includes the use of the Ultra Violet Ray. LUCKY STRIKE—the finest cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so TOASTING removes harmful irritants that cause throat irritation and coughing. No wonder 20,679 physicians have stated LUCKIES to be less irritating!

MOORE ATTENDS RATE HEARING

Donald O. Moore, traffic manager of the Chamber of Commerce, left last night for St. Louis to represent Pittsburgh shippers, in the interest of an equitable fixing of class freight rate differentials between this district and Southwestern freight territory, at a hearing today before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

The case, closed three years ago, is to be reopened on the motion of the commission. Adjustments were made in the previous sessions beneficial to Pittsburgh shippers who had been handicapped in competition with those in Buffalo and other points adjacent to this district, which enjoyed advantages of rate differentials.

U.S. FLOOD BASIS OF GERMAN PLAY

MUNICH, Germany, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The 1926 Mississippi flood provides the inspiration for Georg Kaiser's new play, "Mississippi," which opened in 18 German cities.

New Orleans in this drama figures as a sort of Sodom and Gomorrah which the Mississippi "Flowing Arm of God," reaches out to destroy. Throughout the play conflict rages over whether the government shall dynamite the levee, flooding the farmlands, or let it stand to save the farms while the city perishes.

At length a religious leader's ex-wife who left him when she lost faith in his theories of voluntary poverty, arrives to warn government agents that the religious colony's real purpose in clinging to its land is to uphold and strengthen the "Flowing Arm of God" in its mission of destruction. The government representative (quaintly called Stimson) orders soldiers to drive them out with bayonets.

Quaker Vote Bans 'Blue Laws' Of Colony

WHITTIER, Cal., Nov. 6.—(INS.)—Whittier, peopled largely by Quakers, voted away its Sunday "blue laws" at Tuesday's election, according to returns from 23 out of 26 precincts.

Whittier has had Sunday amusements under ban for years but the vote showed the proposition to permit picture and legitimate theaters to open on Sunday was ahead by 100 votes and seemed certain of success.

ABOUT HOLLYWOOD, BROADWAY AND LOCAL AMUSEMENT REALM

Peggy Wood Won't Give Her Memories Time To Fade Out

By GEORGE SEIBEL

ACTORS and actresses no longer wait until they have retired to write their memoirs. Joseph Jefferson was an old man when his autobiography began to appear in the Century, but Peggy Wood comes with a book on "Actors—and People" almost before the applause has died down for her performance of Portia when Arliss played "The Merchant of Venice."

George Seibel

At first one is inclined to resent this as a piece of youthful impertinence. But presently, reading her book, and seeing how well she writes, and how little she writes about Peggy Wood herself, you go on and on from the first meeting with Bernard Shaw to the last anecdote about Hollywood.

That anecdote is just a trifle irreverent. It's about the director who announced that the last scene would have to be retaken. He complained of the "diction." Another official declared he had heard every word. But he insisted that "he didn't hear the final k in swimmink."

But it isn't so much the anecdotes as the advice to beginners that make the gossipy book, published by Appleton, also practical. There is a chapter about Emma Calve, the great Carmen, who gave Peggy Wood some lessons, and that chapter ought to be read by every actor or singer who comes before an audience feeling how grand he is, and goes away wondering why the audience never find it out.

LYNN FONTANNE'S 10 YEARS

The most encouraging, or discouraging, incident reported was told by Lynn Fontanne. She advises beginners that want to get on the stage to go to agents.

The beginners all come back and say, "But I've been going to an agent now for three weeks and nothing has happened."

Lynn Fontanne had sat "in agents' offices for 10 years herself before anything happened.

Ina Claire also has a view of her own which restrains her from giving advice to stage aspirants. Having started to have ambitions of her own to go on the stage when she was no more than 3 or 4, she says, "I am at a loss how to advise old ladies of 18."

Peggy Wood points out what desperate determination is required to succeed in this profession:

"One famous actress was sick all the time, and used to have to leave the stage to take her medicine. This was Clara Morris. John Drew had a bad cast in one eye, and always played his scenes profile to the audience if possible. There is an actor playing in New York now who has a withered hand, yet I defy you to tell me who it is or notice it while he is playing. And a young English actor who was over here a few seasons ago has a wooden leg, his own flesh-and-blood one having been shot off in the war, and yet he conceals it so admirably that you cannot detect his loss."

MOVING SANTA CLARA

The chapter that tells of Peggy Wood's talks with Bernard Shaw proves her a devout disciple. "It will take longer than a lifetime," she says, "for the world to understand the real love of humanity in that heart, the search for truth and beauty which is the real Shaw." But this devout disciple lets her venerable sage fall into a strange blunder about Santa Clara.

Shaw had disclaimed any intention of writing a play about Saint Francis, and declared he would rather write one about the saint's friend who is buried at Siena, "in that ancient church which is really three churches in layers, one on top of the other."

Of course, Santa Clara isn't buried at Siena, but in Assisi, and not in the church described, but in another. Well, moving the mummy of a saint is easy enough when a wise dramatist and a charming young actress collaborate!

The production requires specially built scenic equipment, all of which is being assembled on the stage of the Pitt. Music incidental to the play will be furnished by Eddie Peyton and his Victor Boys.

Jules Bledsoe, "Old Man River" himself, appears as the star of the New York stage show, "Banquet Blues," which opens in the Penn tomorrow. The film will be William Haines' talkie, "Remote Control."

George Arliss will come to the Warner tomorrow in the film version of his stage success, "Old English."

NANCY CARROLL STARRED

"Laughter," a Paramount production, is the first talking picture in which Nancy Carroll and Frederic March have played together. It will come to the Fulton Theater tomorrow, inaugurating Friday as the new opening day in the house. It also opens in the Sheridan Square on the same day.

Eddie Cantor, in the all Technicolor screen version of "Whoopee," remains in the Aldine a second week, beginning tomorrow. The picture was produced by Florenz Ziegfeld and Samuel Goldwyn.

"One Night at Susie's," co-starring Billie Dove and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., comes to the Harris screen Saturday.

COLLEGE ROMANCE

"College Lovers," featuring Jack Whiting, Marian Nixon, Frank McHugh and Guinn Williams, will open on the Enright screen tomorrow. Dick Powell's stage presentation will be "Jazz Static."

"Dimpled Darlings," with Fritzie White and Bob Startzman featured, opens a week's engagement in the Academy Sunday night with a midnight show.

Broadwaycasting

(Every part of WALT "talker")

Good eve'g, Mr. and Mrs. General Public, and those who tuned in merely to hear the charming Jeanne Aubert, of "Princess Charming," the Imperial Theater's current tenant. She triumphed at the premiere, responding with eight encores of the show's song hit, "I Love Love," which she will warble for you now. (Song here.) Thanks so much, dear lady, for giving my program some tone. I want to correct an item. I chronicled that Mr. Erwin, of the N. Y. Times, had entered a B'way and 42nd St. cigar emporium during an attempted stick-up and bravely went into a booth in the store, defying the bad men, and phoned the details of the crime to his rag. It appears that Erwin took the story over the phone from Frank Ekins, of the staff, who did what reporters usually do in moving pictures.

William Anthony McGuire, the author of Ziegfeld's forthcoming show, "Smiles," has hired a welterweight fighter to teach him boxing lessons. McGuire has the chap with him in Boston, where the show is being renovated. I thought the New York critics might like to know.

I learn, too, that Ziegfeld is having his headaches with Marilyn Miller and Fred and Adele Astaire, the starring trio. They are unhappy, it is said, over their respective roles, one feeling that the other is having more to do, etc. So there is bickering, tiffing, stamping of tootsies, and all the other little things that start wars.

Considering this display of temperament, one suspects that Mr. Ziegfeld may rechristen his new production: "Three 18 a Crowd!"

It might divert you to know that Andy wore specially made high-heeled boots so he would appear taller than Amos in their first flicker . . . Phil Rosa, recently managing editor of Life, the mag, will be sealed on Monday to Betty Rennult, who has what a lot of investors in stocks haven't any more . . . Thank me for warning you, if ever you are invited to Joe Cook's mansion, that when the grotesque butler takes your hat and coat, he immediately throws it on the floor.

Herbert Bayard Swope wagered a mess of thousands that Heywood Broun would poll over 10,000 votes . . . Sixteen thou were needed to win . . . Lew Ayres, whose playing was grand in "All Q. on the W. F.," and Lola Lane are romancing in the Elinor Glyn manner . . . The Neal Andrews (Dorothy Hall of "The Greeks Had a Word For It") have decided not to tell it to a judge.

It may startle you to know that there are over 4,000 chorines out of work . . . The other day, incidentally, when a shop advertised for three models, 700 terpischorines, many of whom were Ziegfeld and George White eyefuls, applied . . . The army is growing, too, considering that there are fewer stage door Jonathans who can afford to give little girls great big handouts.

Beginning Jan'y 1, Al E. Smith will write for the rags a la Calvin. . . . His stuff will appear weekly, however, and it is said his fee per word will be heavier than Coolidge receives. . . . Mary Roberts Rinehart will become a grandmother again soon, her son Ted and his wife anticipating an heir . . . If you do not think that New York is a hick town then take a look at that store on 8th Ave., near 48th St., which features a "new indoor sport" . . . You'll choke when I tell you what it is—horseshoe pitching!

Among other interesting tales is one which concerns a man whose name is famous in local department store circles . . . Associates bought him out—and his name—some time ago. . . . The store still prospers, but today he is an insurance peddler, and his co-workers keep telling him what a coincidence it is—that one of the better department stores also bears his name.

Bugs Baer, who describes Ripley, the Believe-It-or-Not man, in this manner, "You've gotta take his word for it—or change the subject!" says that the earthquake in Italy was caused when Mussolini got too close to a microphone.

Marian Nixon May Appear With Barthelmess In New Film

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1930, Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6.

Though there is still talk of her playing opposite Dick Barthelmess in his next picture, Marian Nixon has finished her long-term contract with Warner Brothers.

The diminutive star now is in New York, where she and her husband, Edward Hillman (of the Chicago Hillmans), are occupying a suite at the Savoy Plaza.

Marian Nixon.

A Cinderella finish that, for when Marian came to Hollywood, nine years ago, she was a little-known dancer, and lived with another girl in a $4-a-week room.

Since then has come stardom and marriage, and now she doesn't have to work any more unless she wants to. But she probably will, for they all come back.

HOMESICK FOR ERIN

Tommy Clifford, the 12-year-old lad, whom Frank Borzage discovered in Dublin, is getting so restless that even the glamor of a film career may not keep him

Healy and Cross Top Show Boat Revue

Healy and Cross, singers, who have been featured in vaudeville and musical comedy, open an engagement tomorrow night as headliners in the new Joe Hiller floor revue on the Show Boat, floating night club, at the foot of Sixth street. Another new feature will be the dance trio, Theodore, Enrico and Novelle. Velly Vernon is to continue as master of ceremonies. Jimmy Carr's orchestra also is being held over.

COUNCIL VOTES BLVD. RAMP.

Motorists coming to town via the Boulevard of the Allies soon will be able to turn to the Liberty Bridge without entering the congested district around Grant street.

Friday the Department of Public Works will advertise for bids for the construction of a ramp at Horace street, which will enable inbound traffic to turn right to the ramp, right to the approach to the bridge below. The cost is estimated at $130,000. On motion of Harry A. Little, Council approved the necessary legislation at a special meeting yesterday.

AUTOIST FREED IN DEATH CASE

Theodore Milliron, 25, of East Pittsburgh, is free today of a charge of involuntary manslaughter, a jury in Criminal Court having been directed to acquit him by Visiting Judge J. Norman Boose, of Somerset County, who held that the commonwealth had failed to prove negligence in an automobile fatality.

Milliron was charged with killing Thomas Malloy, 35, of 3048 Wadlow street, in Library road, Castle Shannon, July 3. It was testified Malloy stepped onto the road in front of Milliron's machine.

RAIL CROSSING PERMIT ASKED

Public Service Commissioner Samuel A. Walker yesterday heard the application of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railway Company for permission to construct a grade crossing in Walnut avenue, Carroll Township, Washington County, near Donora.

If the application is granted it will permit the railroad to make a connection with the Donora Southern Railroad, owned by the American Steel and Wire Company. Such connection would afford a new outlet for the products made by this branch of the United States Steel Corporation.

long in Hollywood. He threatens to start back to the old country any day. Tommy's father is a soap-maker over there. The youngster made a big hit in John McCormack's "Song of My Heart," and since then has played in several pictures.

As the Fox company buys his clothes and pays for his tutors, Tommy has saved almost all his salary as a film actor.

GOLDWYN RESTS

The Samuel Goldwyn Company expects to close down in a couple of weeks until after the first of the year.

Only a skeleton organization will be maintained as the producer has completed all of his current program of pictures.

Ronald Colman

He has made no announcements of his new plans. The first of his 1931 films may be a Ronald Colman or an Eddie Cantor vehicle. Evelyn Laye returns to make another picture, but she first must tour in "Bitter Sweet," her last season's Broadway attraction.

IN JAPAN NOW

One hears that Tsuruko Aoki wife of Sessue Hayakwa, the Japanese actor, sailed last week from Vancouver to join her husband in Tokio. Hayakawa is over there now, acting on the Japanese stage. Upon the conclusion of their Oriental engagement, both of the stars will return to make talking pictures.

Latest addition to the cast of Greta Garbo's new picture is John Miljan, who is kept busy these days at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The actor will play a sculptor, who makes a statue of La Garbo.

Robert Montgomery has the masculine lead in "Inspiration."

baby doll with the taking ways, who got $10,000 as spending coin from her honey before she went to Europe for an alcoholiday. . . . A month later she cabled him: "Am broke; please cable money." . . . He replied with a one-word message . . . The one word was "money."

I am sorry to hear that Richard Bennett's illness closed "Solid South" . . . Ward Morehouse reported the other day that Mr. Bennett made a speech and said that the show was closing the following night. Then it was decided to keep it open on the week-to-week basis.

Bennett, whose hobby is cussing out critics, violated his contract, which prohibits him from making speeches in New York from the stage . . . However, Bennett said his piece anyhow, and, among other pot-shots, he growled: "Dramatic critics ought to die at a certain age! New York critics do not know a good show when they see one!"

This is the first time I have agreed with the star. My confreres thought his new play was a good show and so reported—leaving me practically alone with the suggestion that "Solid South" should have been christened "Ham, Southern Style."

Incidentally, it is Capt. Irving O'Hay who maintains that critics are loved by many—and despised by more!

When Bishop Earl Carroll spoke his mind about the Boston censor on plays from a pulpit recently, he said in part: "All my girls are nice, sweet and lovable children" . . . Gracie Worth, one of his worthier lassies (who appears undraped in his show), was seated in a rear pew, and muttered acidly: "Things I Never Knew Till Now!"

Which reminds me that when someone told Texas Guinan that 21 was the age of discretion, Tex screeched: "Thank heavens, I've passed it!"

And now I must leave you until next week. Until then I remain as usual, That Conceited Winchell Person, who has gone slightly deaf—the result of so much applause, you know.

DISARMAMENT PARLEY OPENS

GENEVA, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—In an atmosphere surcharged with expectancy, the 1930 meeting of the League of Nations' Preparatory Disarmament Commission was opened by the chairman, M. Loudon, of Holland, here today.

In a brief speech formally opening the session, which is scheduled to last until December 17, he assured the delegates that the commission will achieve its goal at this session and "will not adjourn until a disarmament project is definitely drawn up."

Viscount Cecil, of Chelwood, head of the British delegation, lost no time in placing a new proposal before the commission. Before the session had been under way an hour, he filed a project giving the contracting powers the right to increase their land, naval and air armaments "beyond the limited figures if they found themselves facing the menace of organized rebellion or a general interior uprising."

Lord Chelwood also proposed a "permanent disarmament commission under League of Nations auspices, composed of a member of each contracting party, members of the League of Nations Council and representatives from the United States and Soviet Russia.

STEEL FIRMS TO SPEND MILLIONS

Steel companies of the United States are preparing to spend between $50,000,000 and $75,000,000 for new mill equipment, according to George T. Ladd, president of the United Engineering and Foundry Company, makers of rolling mill machinery.

The proportion of this sum that may be expended for steel manufacturies in the Pittsburgh district Mr. Ladd declined to estimate.

The trend in the steel industry, he asserted, was to lower costs by improved machinery. Costs at mills 25 to 30 years old cannot approach those of modern units, he said, and these are increasingly in demand.

PROPERTY VALUATIONS READJUSTED

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

With the developments of the elections there are those sentimental students of pre-prohibition days who profess to see the return of a phrase, an all-descriptive phrase which years ago passed from good usage—"rushing the growler."

Already a generation has come up which knows little or nothing of what the phrase connotes. And this is too bad, regardless of the merit or lack of merit in prohibition.

How many growlers were rushed in Pittsburgh in the days of the swinging doors and the less agile side doors? How many times, before the Brooks Law outlawed the pastime, did the bartender slip the quart can surreptitiously through the side door of Barney Schmidt's elegant, spick and span saloon in Sarah street, near Twenty-fifth? How many kitchen tables bore foam which was transported by the growler route from John O'Toole's place in the West End? And "Fadder" Gesthier's saloon at Twenty-eighth and Sarah? And Mrs. Meyer's Half-way House in Carson street between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth? To say just a word about Hartman's in Woods Run, or John Sauer's in Federal street, or Tom Olliffe's in Preble avenue?

The mills were booming then on the South Side and the growler was never dry. It was an indifferent millman, who, having finished his day's work and perhaps too tired to stroll over to the nearest of a score or more taverns, didn't summon one of his offspring and command him to be off immediately.

There followed then the business of rushing the growler. A quart can in his hand, perhaps hidden beneath a coat, the messenger set forth. Usually he chose a circuitous route which involved alleys and dark avenues, because the growler was then a fit subject for gossip; mothers didn't like to have it said that the growler at So-and-So's house was always on the go.

It was an unfinished saloon which didn't boast a quiet entrance. And usually a rap on the door sufficed. The messenger handed in his growler and his dime, the bartender, always a friend of the family, unconcernedly strolled to the bar, pulled down the spigot and allowed beer and foam to pour down with all the enthusiasm of Niagara.

The homeward trip was more precarious, for most growlers possessed faulty lids, and a jogging messenger soon found the refreshing suds losing themselves on the highways. In such cases there was a reprimand waiting at home.

All growlers, of course, were not alike. Some were cans of two quarts rather than one, and in such cases two dimes, or at least a dime and a nickel, were passed through the door to the bartender. Come to think of it, no two growlers ever seemed alike, and there were those steady customers of the bar who, watching from the rail the bartender filling the growler, might announce, "The Joneses are having their beer tonight." This, you can be sure, led to interesting family feuds.

Oftentimes, when relations between the bartender and the family were not of the best, there developed ingenious battles of wit. The shrewd bartender rushed the beer into the growler so hurriedly that little was beer and much was foam, and there wouldn't be enough to go 'round—a literal kettle of suds.

But a device was soon created to forestall this malicious practice. The lady of the house, or the man of the house, before the young one was sent on his journey, slyly greased the growler—an invention which caused the suds to evaporate before the enemy could say John Prohibition, and thus made way for, as they don't say any more, more beer.

With the Brooks Law, rushing the growler died a quick death. No longer, said the law, shall beer be carried thus! And if the brewers complained at this restriction, think of the wail that went up in the can industry.

RENEW FIGHT ON STATION PACT

Utilities Oppose Plans of City, P. R. R. at Hearing Before State Commission

Verbal fireworks burst at a continued hearing today before the Public Service Commission on the plans for street changes involved in a contract between the city and the Pennsylvania Railroad in connection with the new terminal.

Commissioners Samuel Walker and Charles Young heard a proposal to change the alignment of a curb at Grant and Eleventh street to give more cart way. Attorney E. W. Smith, representing the Pittsburgh Railways company, objected to the plan on the ground that it would violate the spirit of the cantract entered into between the city and the Pennsylvania Railroad recently, and which replaced a contract made in 1925.

SUBWAY NEEDS

Attorney Charles P. Lang, for the city, contended that the new contract must of necessity allow for changes in street alignments, as such would be imperative in the event the city ever builds the subway for which bonds were voted several years ago.

After considerable wrangling over the matter, the city withdrew its proposal for the change in plans.

The question of damage likely to result to other utilities companies by the vacation and re-relocation of streets to make way for the new terminal, again came up for discussion. P. A. Pfleger, attorney for the Pittsburgh Railways Company, called E. T. Whitter, vice president of the Pennsylvania, and asked him if the contract of 1925 contained a provision for reimbursing other concerns forced to move when the terminal is built.

TO CONTEST DAMAGES

Whiter admitted that such provision was made in the old contract, but that the new agreement between the railroad and the city absolved both signatories from paying damages to onyone. He said the railroad would not pay damages unless compelled to do so by law.

Nine subsidiaries of the Bylesby corporation, including the Duquesne Light and Pittsburgh railways companies, are fighting the street changes because of the expense entailed, for which there is no provision for reimbusement.

Bishop Mann Installs Rector at Crafton

The Rev. John S. Taylor was installed as rector of the Nativity Episcopal Church, Crafton, last night by the Rt. Rev. Alexander Mann, Protestant Episcopal bishop of the diocese of Pittsburgh. Many clergymen from city and out-of-town churches took part in the exercises.

A reception was held after the services in the parish hall. The Rev. Mr. Taylor came here from Rochester, Pa., where he had been the rector of the Episcopal Church for several years. Before entering the ministry, he had been associated with Carnegie Institute of Technology for 18 years.

Health Lectures For Railroaders

Dr. C. W. Goodman will give the first of a series of health talks for Pennsylvania Railroad employes and their families tomorrow evening at the railroad's Y. M. C. A., Twenty-eighth street. The second talk will be given there November 14 by Dr. A. M. Parks. Other talks will be given by physicians in Room 309 Pennsylvania station November 11 and November 18.

CITY DENIES REVISION UPWARD

Changes Made to Equalize Rates in Sections Which Improvements Affect

Readjustment of property valuations have been made in a number of wards in the City of Pittsburgh, but there has been no general revision upward, Thomas C. McMahon, chief assessor of the Board of Assessors, announced today.

McMahon said readjustments have been made principally in the Nineteenth, Twentieth, Twenty-eighth and Thirty-second wards of the city. There also have been some revaluations in the Twelfth, Eighteenth, Twenty-ninth and Thirtieth wards.

APPEALS BEING HEARD

The Board of Assessors is now engaged in hearing appeals from the triennial assessments made for 1931.

McMahon said:

"There has been no general revision in the city and you can make that emphatic. What the readjustments made will amount to in value is problematical. When the board finishes hearing appeals, my own judgment tells me there will be little difference in the aggregate. Most of the adjustments have taken place along the line of boulevard improvements and in some of the newly annexed wards.

"The improvement of the Saw Mill Run boulevard has brought about some readjustments there. The entire Nineteenth Ward has been rechecked, but there has been no general advance in property values in any ward in the city.

"In some cases it has been necessary to raise valuations and in others to lower them. Some properties were assessed ridiculously low. In the newly annexed wards there are certain single buildings in the downtown section, where owners pay more taxes than property holders of an entire ward."

While it is expected that the total valuation of the city will show a considerable increase the coming year, much of this will be due, it was indicated, to improvements made. Valuations were not disturbed in any sections of the city outside of the wards named.

COUNCIL TO PAY AUDIT

Council has agreed to appropriate sufficient money to make a complete audit of the books of the American Reduction Company.

The members made this decision after being informed by Controller James P. Kerr and Edwin W. Smith, special counsel, that more information is needed to complete the suit for more than $1,000,000 against the company now pending in the courts.

The suit was instituted as a result of the charges of former Controller Henry Oliver Evans that the company owed that amount to the city because of items that should not have been charged against the city.

The members of Council yesterday voted $5,000 for continuation of the audit being made by MacLean & Co. and Collins & Co. Dr. Kerr, in a letter in which he recited the history of the case as shown in the records of his office, wrote:

"I do not know anything about the merits of this case, neither do I know anything about the inspiring motives nor the personal animosities that may have crept into it, but I do know that this finally has become the city's case and must be determined in some manner, and I am most anxious to have this matter finally adjusted."

GANGSTER GIRL :-: By JACK LAIT

Annie Joins Forces Of Powerful New York Gang

CHAPTER I.

The telephone bell in eight-o-o rang. . . . and again. Polack Annie, who had bumped off the two toughest gorillas in her native town, Chicago, and because of whose deadly red hair and tilted nose and adolescently ripe form more than a dozen gangsters had been chopped down with machine gun bullets, opened her eyes; she stretched and picked up a French hand-set.

"Hello," said she.

"B. B.," she heard in her ear. "Aw-oh-okay-c'mon up."

She smoothed the covers, reached for a cigaret and lit it, sat higher on the pillows, patted and set her flaming crown, and waited.

She heard a key and the door opened. She turned on a phoney smile and a look of welcome.

Toward her came a man of medium height, well set up. His clothes were tailor made, punctiliously pressed, but of sedate material and pattern. His face was sallow and saffron, buf it was singular and not unattractive. His step had authority. He had come in with a key which he was easing back into his pocket.

"H'lo, Annie," he said. "Hope you appreciate this $50-a-day layout."

"Goldie Gorio, answered Annie, "had a mansion."

"Oh—so? He had a high funeral, too."

Annie Indifferent

Invited to Go if She Doesn't Like Place

"He was laid away in a 50-grand stiff-box an' the flowers was nine carloads."

"He couldn't smell 'em."

"No—but the whole world did . . . listen, Big Boy—you're keepin' me in this here $50-a-day suite becus times is tough in this distric' an' you can rent the cheap rooms, but you got no call for the big-time camps since the market went Democratic. You ain' givin' me no good time. I've slep' on a bare mattress in a joint an' enjoyed it; an' I've stayed in feathers just as ritz as this gingerbread bridal cell . . . Now that that's that—what's what?"

"Silk" Freeman smiled a smile that was almost a sneer.

"Take a sweet earful o' this, fire-top," he said, as he slid onto a chair. "You're not in Chicago now. You're in New York—my town. I didn't invite you, and this is a bad place to come to if you ain't sent for. You came in here carrying the banner and singing the blues. Now, if you don't care for the set-up, toss on the rags and scram. I did copesettee before I met you—I guess I can battle it out after I never glom you again."

Polack Annie took a deep drag on her butt, stomped it out in the porcelain ash tray with "Hotel Napoleon" burnt in it, gulped, held herself in, and said:

"Hey, Big Boy—you got me all cockeyed. I didn't mean—"

Different System

Gangdom in New York Not the Same

"Swell. Then we understand each other. You beat a blow-off in Chi, you breezed in here, you looked me up, I put you up and I put up with you. So, don't talk to me or talk up to me, because I don't take that stuff from any twist that ever navigated. When you realize who you are, who I am and what it's all about, I'll talk turkey to you. And make it snappy."

Polack Annie bit her red lips. She hadn't stood for much of that sort of conversation in the second person. But she was down and out, a long way from anywhere, and she wasn't yap enough not to know that Silk Freeman was a big shot.

And he was.

She had been reared in Chicago, the home of the storied gangsters. And the stories were true. But the Chicago outfit were chiselers. Now she was in the nest of the big dough. In Chicago the rackets were run by a bunch of boss hoodlums who had battled up through the ranks by force of fists and guts and gats and typewriters and pineapples. In New York the aces had that kind of rough babies working for them.

Here the leaders, the chiefs, were politicians, capitalists, organizers. They sat in silk shirts behind mahogany desks. They let the suckers hustle for them and the trimmers muscle for them, put over the tall orders, slaughter one another and get peanuts for their pay. But they operated from the Adam's apple up. The men who did the slugging and the shooting were a flock of white wings to them.

Silk Freeman

Master Racketeer Rose From Depths

And of all these, Silk Freeman was the Abou Ben Adhem.

Rising from slum origin, he had been educated on the sidewalks and finished in the poolrooms, gambling joints and speakeasies. Now he was the master racketeer of the proudest metropolis in the world.

Legions slaved for him and slew for him. He owned hotels and theaters and police captains and night clubs and office buildings and judges and Rolls-Royces and a borough president and a bank or two; he was cutting in on legitimate and nefarious enterprises from hand organs to ocean-going liners and from heroin to art works.

He would finance anything from a corner newsstand to a stadium. He was in on the crooked boxing bonanza, fixed races and baseball games in the bag; he controlled a boundless bootlegging system and dope ring and gambling monopolies; he worked with stock swindlers and bond thieves; he was behind the fabulous criminal bail bond trust; and he had a municipal franchise for a fleet of omnibuses.

His monicker, "Silk," fitted him like a mantle of that fine, delicate, glossy and fibrous substance which first hung about the fat shoulders of that fastidious and fantastic Roman emperor, Heliogabalus. Freeman had fibrous qualities of strength, personality and inelasticity, with a sheen and gloss over it all. They tear fangs from rattlesnakes with a silk handkerchief.

His eye was shrewd, yet languorous, and it mirrored the congenital bargaining impulse. His nose was delicate and a bit hawk-like. His lips were thin and bloodless. He rarely smiled and never laughed, and his smile was more feared than his frown.

Man of Mystery

Use of Drugs Makes Him Very Shrewd

He was as mysterious as he was notorious. Everybody on Broadway knew him—and nobody knew him anywhere. He hung out in two restaurants (in neither of which he had any financial interest) and had private telephones in each; he could be seen often lounging before a drugstore which was no hangout for any of his class, and in Hotel Napoleon (which was his and where he harbored never less than 20 girls—some broke, some mad over him, some so stewed or coked-up they didn't know what town they were in) and in his own armored apartment on Park avenue, in a building which was his, and where he "hit the stem" and beautiful girls cooked and lit his pill.

For "Silk" Freeman was a "hophead." The thrill of the exhilarating poppy had him clutched. Each day at about 4 o'clock he got the yenyen. When in the spasm of the deep breath from the slender pipe he was shrewder than a railroad president ever was—normal. Then he schemed out his big deals and his broad campaigns. And after that he slept. They say he slept. No one had ever seen him sleep. No one knew when he slept. He was up and about at all hours of the night, and around again too early next morning for his stooges.

He must have had contact with a thousand people every day. Wherever he was, whatever he was doing, strange looking men were pussyfooting in, buzzing in his ear, handing him papers or getting papers from him.

Very Wealthy

Takes Whatever Comes His Way

He kept an office in one of his big skyscrapers. There bookkeepers tallied figures, secretaries answered calls and talked in the lingo of the runaround of trade. The names on the door were blinds. The Big Boy, as they called him (and it was abbreviated to B. B.), rarely came there. His day wasn't long enough. And when he added the night to it, there still wasn't time to live the lives he had pyramided for himself.

His office was in his hat. His hat cost $25. And it sat on a $25,000,000 head. The head had sandy hair, the kind that would never grow gray.

He didn't know what he was worth. As long as he could dodge the inevitable assassination, which must be his finish, he was a rich man. When that would come, many of his assets would die with him, for there was no other man who could juggle Silk Freeman's playthings and keep them off the ground. He had neither wife nor child to get rich for. He just couldn't help it. He was a gambler in his heart and a loan shark in his soul.

He was no coward. True, he carried two bodyguards. He had earned them. He had double-crossed the world. He had welched on all his debts, straight or crooked; he had put the hah-hah on his every pledge and promise and obligation, figuring that a man who served a sense of honor was a man who was afraid to disown it. He had taken whatever came his way or whatever and whoever he could meet on his way—and his pockets went one way. He was one wise wire, and the rest of humanity was made up of clucks and chumps who could be bought, licked, outguessed or knocked off. It was his America.

At His Mercy

Supplies Her Needs of Existence

And his America stood for it.

So Polack Annie knew. She was under his hospitality, in his custody and at his mercy. An orphan, a fugitive, an unwed widow and a derelict, she had beat Chicago. "Secretary" Gleason and his triumphant mob of murderers, finding out that she had blasted Kinky King, their chieftain, with the Edgewater Kid's gold automatic, had taken her for a ride—but she had made a miraculous getaway.

Silk had been Goldie's New York connection in some of the national networks of booze manipulating. She didn't tell him that it was she who had blown Goldie's belly out with his own gilded gats. It was half likely a hep party like Freeman knew it. Anyway——.

She had limped in flat. B. B.

Democrats gave me a birthday November 4. I was 51 years old, and they elected 51 Democrats.

Will Rogers

When I am 90 we will be running this country. The Republicans carried California but lost America. Gov. Rolph was a Democrat running under assumed colors. The Democrats nominated their president Tuesday, Franklin D. Roosevelt. I bet Mr. Hoover is tickled to death, for they will support him better than his own party did, and th West, why they just saturate everything they got their han on.

GIVES UP LEGAL WORK PENDING DECISION

State Bar Committee Gives Attorney Until February To Submit His Answer

Attorney George H. Calvert, whose disbarment has been asked because of alleged mismanagement of the $3,000,000 estate of Mrs. Eleanor H. Davidson, will not be required to file an answer in the disbarment action until February, because of his mental condition, the Board of Governance of the Pennsylvania Bar announced at the conclusion of a hearing in the case yesterday afternoon.

In a statement issued after the hearing the standing masters' committee of the Board of Governance said that before considering postponement of the case the board required that Calvert file a stipulation in which he bound himself not to practice law pending disposition of the case.

HAS OPENED OFFICE

Calvert recently opened an office in the Oliver Building.

John P. Connelly, prominent member of the Philadelphia bar, represented Calvert at the hearing. He asked that the hearing be continued for three months, declaring.

"Mr. Calvert has not recovered sufficiently from his nervous and mental breakdown to prepare properly his answer to the disbarment action or testify in the proceedings."

DOCTORS TESTIFY

Four physicians, including Dr. George J. Wright, alienist, testified before the hearing masters, Attorneys Charles F. C. Arensberg, Thomas C. Hare, of Altoona, and Arthur W. Mitchell, of Erie, that Calvert has not recovered sufficiently to defend himself and that his doing so might be accompanied by considerable danger to himself.

Disbarment of Calvert and former Judge Henry G. Wasson was asked by Martha and Blanche Hibbert, sisters of Mrs. Davidson, who allege that the estate was grossly mismanaged. Wasson's disbarment was recommended. His case is still pending before the Supreme Court.

The Camera Question Box

Today's question: Louis Persinger, musician, says that everyone should not only receive an economic education, but should also be educated for leisure. What do you think of this pedagogy?

T. W. LEWIS, Homestead, student, Pitt: I believe that he is right. A person should make his work play and reap the benefits thereof.

Mr. Lewis

JOHN GROVE, East End, student, Pitt: This seems to me to be a good pedagogy. A person should use his leisure in a way that will not only bring him pleasure, but will be of profit to him as well.

Mr. Grove

GEORGE S. M'GILL, Munhall, student, Pitt: Mr. Persinger is right. People would find their leisure time would refresh their minds if they would combine it with some business that they enjoy.

Mr. McGill

ALLEN WILKOFF, Squirrel Hill, student: I think this is a very advisable precedure, for people are often called upon to experience certain things in their leisure moments. It is advisable for them to be well informed on what they are going to experience.

Mr. Wilkoff

MISS JOSEPHINE COLANTONI, McKees Rocks, student, Pitt: I think Mr. Persinger is right. People should be educated for their leisure. Life itself is an education through which we learn by experience.

Miss Colantoni

MISS HELENE KUHN, Mt. Oliver, student, Pitt: Yes, one should be educated in order to derive the greatest amount of pleasure from one's leisure hours. There are so many valuable ways to spend leisure time.

had given her hostage, hospice and sanctuary. He had given her the needs of existence and more. She could sign for whatever her stomach craved or her heart okayed. So far he hadn't demanded a thing. She had no illusions about any altruistic motives of Silk Freeman.

Strange Cargo

Chinese Are Smuggled Into Country

"Right, B. B.," she said. "Now, what's the orders, the instructions—or the proposition?"

"Well! Just a broad, after all. . . . I'll give you the orders in a minute. The instructions go with 'em. The proposition—that'll come later. Now, get me right. I like you. That is, I like you as much as I can like anybody I like. But you have to work. I've got a 'racket all lined up for you."

"Is it juicy?"

"Juicy? It's gooey!"

The telephone rang.

The bluff bows of the deep-boweled launch gently pushed aside the muggy, milky fog that clung to the waters of New York Bay. Now and again the motor shot a shiver through the beams of the big, black, bulky hulk. It was night, moonless, and the craft was running without lights. Foghorns and warning booms from the other river vessels tore the thick air. In the pilot house stood two men with binoculars glued to their eyes.

The converted chandler's boat carried in its guts a strange cargo. Huddled there were 12 yellow, masked, frightened Chinese, taken off a freighter from Halifax at the 12-mile limit. A contraband cargo smuggled in to be vomited into New York, c. o. d., at $1,000 a head, the money to be paid by relatives, employers, friends. A dozen like so many more of the millions of Mongolians in the big cities, to shuffle through the narrow streets of Chinatown, crowd into beehive dormitories and opium dives, labor in laundries, chop suey places, on truck farms; to join lawless tongs, kill, steal and ravish — illegitimate intruders, unwanted at home, unwanted here.

To the crew and the ruffians who sat on deck these creatures were like pigs. If a "rap" threatened, and this was a Federal offense, hard to square or beat, the "monkeys" would be jettisoned without hesitation. They were worth $12,000 landed alive. But——

Suddenly two shrill blasts, answering a signal from the pilot house. It meant trouble to port. In an instant 10 burlies rushed the hold.

A government cutter was chasing. Rat-a-tat came machine-gun fire, 125 bullets to the minute.

The gangsters all had "saps" in their hands, blackjacks. They came at the huddled Chinks and smashed them over their heads, again and again. There was chaotic wailing and jabbering—and then silence except the oaths of the hoodlums and the socks of their saps. They picked up the limp forms, carried them one and two at a time, and dumped them into the water.

The motor had stopped. The cutter drew up. Uniformed coast guards boarded. They went through the whole craft. Nothing contraband was found. The coast guards snickered. They knew something.

And he slammed the instrument down.

"We lost a cargo last night," said Silk.

"Cargo?" she queried "Rubber, hootch, grain, autos or——"

"Monkeys! One of my op'rations. We ease those mustards in at a grand a head. We had a dozen. They got a chase and they knocked 'em on the noodle and chucked 'em in the drink."

Polack Annie, Chicago graduate, drew deeply.

"Gawd," she breathed. "They're only Chinks—but, yellow or white, that's pretty hard boiled. I've seen plenty an' done plenty an' went through plenty in Chicago. But this turns my stomach."

"It don't give me any appetite," chimed in Freeman.

"After all, they're human. Oh, my Lord—12 human souls sent to kingdom come—gone ——"

"Twelve what? Human souls gone? Twelve human souls hell —12 grand!"

NEWS FEATURES IN TALKIES

Talking picture producers invade the newspaper more than any other field for entertaining features. If it is a good serial story and wins the favor of newspaper readers, it quickly gets into talking pictures. If it is a feature of any other character that is entertainment for newspaper readers the producers figure that it will be equally entertaining for talking picture theater audiences.

This theory is emphasized at the downtown Warner theater starting today where two of the Sun-Telegraph's outstanding reader-interest features are on the program as talking picture subjects. They were both made by the Vitaphone Corporation and one of them—Walter Winchell—is being exhibited for the first time in Pittsburgh.

Winchell is star in a comedy of Broadway night life titled "The Bard of Broadway" in which this famous columnist divulges some secrets of Mazda Lane in a way all his own.

The other feature is the celebrated "Believe It or Not" in which Robert L. Ripley, creator of these cartoons, shows on the screen many of the "Queeriosities" he has unearthed and "Believe It or Not" they furnish entertainment, amusement and instruction to old and young just as they do to the thousands of readers who follow them in the Sun-Telegraph every day.

These two favorites round out a program in which George Arliss in "Old English" is featured.

BOYS USED IN 'NUMBER' SALE

That two 15-year-old McKees Rocks high school boys had been engaged writing numbers, developed in Criminal Court when two men, pleading no defense to operating a lottery, were sentenced to jail by Judge Elder W. Marshall.

The defendants were Frank Kon, 90 East Ohio street, fined $100 and 60 days in jail, and Carl Blazpiviski, 110 Ella street, McKees Rocks, 30 days in jail.

Mrs. Genevive Conley, 155 Orchard street, McKees Rocks, testified she played 15 cents on No. 590 September 10 and hit. She should have won $81, but did not get the money.

Joseph Schine, 15, of 71 Orchard street, said he attended Stowe High School and wrote numbers for Kon, working among the school children and neighbors. He employed Tom Popek, 15, of 106 Orchard street, another Stowe High School boy, to write numbers. Popek wrote the number for Mrs. Conley. When she hit he referred her to Schine, who in turn referred her to Kon, and Kon referred her to Blazpiviski. The latter promised to pay the money, but never did.

Mrs. Mitchell Paid High Tribute at Luncheon Of Music Group

Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky's tribute to Elsie Breese Mitchell at the opening luncheon of the music department, Congress of Clubs, yesterday but voiced the sentiments of many Congress members. Mrs. Mitchell has built up the music department and organized the choral which she is now directing in addition to serving again as chairman of music. It is not only for her art, which is very real, that the Congress appreciates Elsie Mitchell.

Yesterday's luncheon was one of the best attended the music department has ever had and was marked by the usual interesting program. In a paper that must have entailed an immense amount of time and effort, Mrs. H. C. Breidert, a member of the department, discussed medieval music, giving a comprehensive history of music up to and including the Middle Ages. This was illustrated in part by some very fine charts, the work of Mrs. Breidert's husband, and further by vocal and piano music which Mrs. Mitchell furnished.

George Miller, the choral accompanist, contributed several fine piano solos, and Mrs. G. B. Cooley, with Mrs. H. D. Everett at the piano, played two groups of 'cello solos.

BAND PLAYS IMPORTANT PART IN THE SARTORIAL PROGRAM

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Nov. 6.—And the band played on! Well, it most certainly is doing so as far as a sartorial theme is concerned, for the band is still of overwhelming importance to many frocks, coats and suits. Lots of dresses, indeed, rely solely on the band to give them the necessary smartness and also to mold the garment to the figure without creating too compromising severe a line. This softly molded line is so good with crisply flaring skirts because it creates an aura of freshness and youth, a combination that the right frock can bestow on even the woman past the first flowery flush of youth.

PICTURESQUE indeed are many of the new coats gracing the autumn scene here. Much liked are coats that suggest, by virtue of their capes and fitted lines, something of the postilion coats of the early nineteenth century. Such coats are much liked by the younger set for the trig, youthful lines that they bestow. We had one of these coats sketched for you last week at the Ritz. It was worn by a charming girl from your side of the Atlantic and was of black, dull surfaced woolen, fitted and seamed at the waistline. The cape and skirt are circular in cut and the wide revers combined with the cape and fitted waistline are certainly reminiscent of the old postilion coat. Black caracul is used for the scarf collar and cuff bands.

WE ARE NOT off white simply because off-white shades are used for so many evening frocks. Ice-white, a very pale bluish-green just off the white, sponsored by Vionnet is an excellent alternative to the pure-white frock. It is the color of the lovely Vionnet model sketched here.

* * *

IT IS USED in crepe-satin for this Empire gown which is one of the grand successes of the new Vionnet collection. The satin side of the fabric makes the crossed over, tightly molded bodice which features the bands. These are drawn around to the back and tied in two small bows at the base of the low decolletage. The flaring skirt has a scalloped hemline and a deep border of the satin. As for the body of the dress, it uses the dull side of the fabric and molds the figure closely.

AND GIVE YOUR SKIN A NATURAL FINISH

FOR that natural, ingenue finish you must choose your powder with utmost care. A very light shade makes the complexion spotty. An extra dark powder makes the face hard and old. Primrose House Beige blends perfectly with the skin, actually becoming a part of it, leaving the complexion smooth and youthful. It is so exquisitely fine that it never cakes or clogs, yet it clings for hours. Try it. This $3 powder now comes in dollar portions. The smartest shades, keyed to the mode.

Polack Annie Ends Gorio's Reign of Terrorism

CHAPTER XXVI.

"So," smirked Goldie, "Monk—my most faithful boy—coughed up the works, eh? Gangster tells all! It's gettin' to be a fine racket—Chimp squeals to the cops, Monk squeals to my sweetie an' comes gattin' for me—an' my dumb mob lets a fumble-fingered swill-box skimmer like Gleason knock 'em off . . . well, looks like Goldie's got to start all over again an' get himself a new bunch an' a new woman, eh?"

Annie listened with a shudder.

"Did you—was what he said—" she turned toward the lifeless remains of Monk, and closed her eyes.

"Ree-dic'lous," answered Goldie, with an exaggerated gesture. "I loved the kid. I loved him so much, I wanted to p'tect him—his honor! I didn' trust YOU—see?"

She shook her head. She didn't.

"Well, I do. I knew you'd been Kinky King's moll. I figgered when the Kid was out—h'm—maybe Kinky, he comes in. So I have Chimp plant a typewriter across the street to clip Kinky if he comes . . . well, Chimp made a mistake—could I help that?"

And he raised his hands in an arc of innocent despair, typical of his race.

Annie bit her lip.

"So you—you thought I wasn' on the level with the Kid?" she choked out.

"I didn't think so, exac'ly—I on'y thought in case of——"

"But I played up an' up with you. I jus' saved your life!"

"Yeah—I heard you—thanks. If I was sure it was for ME you was stallin——"

"For who else?" demanded Annie. "For God's sake, Goldie—for who else? For who an' for what? After what's been between us? I couldn't save the Kid, so I got the rat what I thought got him. I could save you, an' I took a chance with my life an' stood up before that rod, an' Monk crazy as hell an' too bleary to know what was what. Why?"

"You—you mean this?" cried Goldie, now in sincere earnest and gazing eagerly, tremblingly at the vehement woman.

Wants to Go Away

"Yes—and a whole lot more. I'm a one-man girl. Luck hasn't been with me often. I never could hold my man long. But as long as I had him he held me, Goldie—" She came toward him, her slender arms outstretched. "Goldie—take me in your arms—kiss me—tell me that you love me—I—I love you!"

Her cheek was against his, where the lather was drying. His massive bosom heaved with pride, with triumph. Never before had she confessed that she loved him. She had yielded all but that.

"Babes," he breathed, when his hold relaxed, "lemme go. I shave—quick. You pack—quick. We lam—quick. I never think Goldie Gorio could run away from anybody, from anything. My gang shot to hell, the cops crossin' me, Chimp prob'ly tippin' off this hide-away—no! I wouldn't run—not from the whole army . . but now it's diff'rent. For you! With you! My racket is washed up. We go—far away—to Italy—I got forty, fifty grand—I know where to lay my hands on it—I gave it to—to a man—to buy me somethin' with it—that I don' need now—come on—I shave—you pack—"

He strode swiftly toward the bathroom. His off-key whistle sprang to his puckered, smiling, blood-red lips.

He turned, and without skipping a note, he tossed her a kiss with his upturned palm.

The whistle died. One hollow after-tone, like a gasp, followed it. And all was still. The hand in air fell as though the shoulder were a ball-bearing swivel. The big, dark eyes of the gangster terror bulged.

Annie Wants Vengeance

Polack Annie stood with her back to the wall. In each hand she held one of Gorio's gleaming, glittering gold automatics. They were pointed at him.

"You murderin' gorilla," she said, and her voice was amazingly steady, "this is the payoff . . . for the Kid an' the mob an' poor ol' Monk an' even that pickled rat, Kinky King—an' for ME!"

He was collected now. He was thinking fast. He was measuring the distance to the bathroom door—and to her—and at the same time considering parley, palaver, strategy, force, surprise—

"Stand where you are, Goldie," she commanded. "Nothin's goin' to save you. I'm goin' to croak you first. Then I'll get Chimp if it takes me all my life. You didn't know the kind o' red-head you went after over a whole lot o' good men's dead bodies."

"All right," he said firmly, though there was no moisture in his voice. "Go 'head . . . I didn' dream that Goldie Gorio, after all he went through, would be knocked off by a broad—but if that's in the cards—deal!"

"Do you—want to pray?"

"What's that your business? I didn' give the Kid time to pray . . . if I could get my hands on your dirty white neck, I wouldn' give you time, neither . . . let's go!"

What [illegible] loud crashing against some resisting obstacle. The house was trembling. Blow after blow—pounding—

Goldie cocked his sensitive ears.

"The cops!" he hoarsed. "Or Gleason's mob . . . slip me them gats . . . we'll give 'em a run—gimme my gats, woman—I tell you——"

He started impulsively, blindly at her.

Annie's muscles tightened.

Kills Goldie

Goldie stopped, staggered, and folded up. His animal body wilted to the stained carpet as though his clothes had nothing in them.

The door was flung open. The Chief of Police crossed the threshold, stopped by the picture. Annie's hands were coming slowly downward. First one and then the other of the shining, smoking automatics dropped of their own weight and bounced on the resilient covering of the floor.

"Well, I'll be damned!" cried the Chief.

"You—you got me c—cold this time," stuttered Annie weakly.

"Got you? Yes, baby—I got you . . beat it—get ME?"

"Wh—what?"

"Lam—scram—good work . . I'm sorry, Goldie resisted arrest and I had to plug him with his own cannons, but—in the line of duty——"

"How? Who?"

"Me . . . Chimp coughed up the location. I came here in person to arrest Goldie. I surprised him. He came at me. I grabbed his own gold gats and—well, there he is . . . Annie, take the air."

"You—you don't want me?"

"Oh! That's another matter. When all this blows by—give a guy a buzz on the 'phone," and the Chief winked.

"I mean—the Kinky King business—"

"King? Kinky King? Whatever did become of him? Oh, yes. He was shot with a lipstick or something, wasn't he?"

"He was shot with a gold-plated .44," said Polack Annie, "and I fired the shot. It was all a mistake. I found out since, but—"

Annie Leaves

"Come, come—how could shooting Kinky King be a mistake?"

"He didn't get the Edgewater Kid."

"So Chimp tells me. When that baby got spilling, he spilled the works—he just went squeal-drunk. He got the Kid . . . hey! What's this?"

The Chief crossed the room and with his heavy-soled foot he turned over the lifeless lump that had been monk.

"Monk! I thought he was—he was supposed to be—"

"He got away with his life and crawled here to croak Goldie. But Goldie strangled him first. It was him told me who got the Kid."

"Oh—did he? Well, who did get the Kid?"

"Chimp."

"Chimp—and him—Monk! He'd have died for Goldie—and did . . . . . and so did Chimp, if I forgot to tell you. When he woke up this morning and heard his mob was massacred, and he had that confession hangover, he took the Dutch route—the CKX—hung himself in his cell by his suspenders. There was only one of the gang left—I came after him, but you beat me to it—you beat me to it . . . . now beat it!"

"Wh-where shall I go? Where can I go?"

"Listen, sister, that's your problem. I don't direct traffic. Go anywhere you like—but go! You complicate matters . . . the department needs some Page 1 copy, and you is no part of it this time. So grab your little tin hat and breeze."

"Thanks," sighed Polack Annie. "I didn't like you the first time I met you, but—"

"Blow! Jump the reservation. I'm getting sore."

"Okay chief — I'm on my way," and she started for the door. She stopped and turned. "Oh, by the way—I can't get far—I haven't got a dime—not even carfare to town—"

The Chief searched his pockets. He brought up two nickels and four pennies. He scratched his head in embarrassment. Suddenly his eyes lighted up and a smile broadened over his ample mouth. He reached his thumb and one finger down into the little pocket under the right-hand side of his belt. They came up clutching something. He pushed it into Polack Annie's palm.

"Here," he said, "and good luck to you."

Past the door she looked to see.

It was a twenty-dollar gold-piece!

A Girl's Best Friend These Days Is Her Caution, in Fay King's Opinion

By FAY KING.

It's not what a man spends on you but what he thinks of you that counts.

Too many girls prefer to gad around with a "good spender," and to their sorrow learn too late how and where he gets his money.

One such girl was stepping into a cafe with her gaudy boy friend. Two friends stepped up to him. He excused himself and asked her to wait—a moment.

She waited three hours. Later she found his "friends" were plain-clothes cops. They carried him off to jail.

The man who really cares, but can spend little on an evening's entertainment, is more worth while than one who lavishes a lot on his playmate of the moment who doesn't mean much to him.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Lillian Makes Madge's Task a Difficult One

As Lillian thrust the receiver of the telephone into my hand, I heard the voice of the hotel operator droning: "Number, please!" But instead of giving her Helena Brixton's number again, as Lillian had requested, I hung up the receiver and faced my astonished friend with a little smile.

"Listen to me," I said firmly. "Nothing has happened, nothing, and I know why Mrs. Brixton is coming over here."

"You mean to be kind," she said slowly, with a chill in her voice, "but you are not being fair. If Helena has talked to you, then I am all the more convinced that—"

"Will you use what Dicky calls your alleged brain—and I think the adjective should be put in capitals—" I said crossly. "Do you think if anything serious had happened I should be acting this way? It is simply this. Marion and Carolyn have come home a day earlier, that is all and I suppose Mrs. Brixton fears you may be offended and wishes you to hear her explanation before you see Marion."

She started from her seat impulsively, joy banishing every other emotion.

"Where is Marion?" she said. "Is Helena bringing her? I wonder how long it will take her to come over. Of course, she'll take a taxi, Madge! She ought to be here in a quarter of an hour, don't you think?"

"Not longer," I said. "But you won't have to wait that long to see Marion, only long enough for me to explain some things to you."

"Why! where is she?"

"Down in the library, with Harry. No," as she rushed toward the door, "you must wait. I'll hurry through the telling, but I promised Marion you should hear from me her reason for coming home without notifying you."

She stopped short as if a lasso had settled around her shoulders and, turning, came back to her chair, her eyes fixed on mine.

"I knew there was something," she said, as if to herself. "Tell me, Madge, but hurry!"

"It's very simple," I said. "Marion and Carolyn had planned to come home tomorrow with the two classmates whom Carolyn had invited for the holidays."

"I know," Lillian interrupted. "They all had demerits, so they couldn't come home earlier."

"Yes, but Marion and Carolyn unexpectedly found that they had worked theirs off and could come home today if they wished. They did not intend to change their plans for one day, however, but when Mr. Owen appeared at the school this morning—"

Lillian stiffened in her chair, her hands clenching the arms.

"Owen! Charles Owen! That awful man! Are you telling me that Marion came up to town with him?"

"And with Carolyn, his niece, as well, remember that," I said emphatically. "I know; I don't like it any more than you do, but there has been no harm done, there will be none, if you do not exaggerate the importance of the incident to Marion."

My conscience gave a guilty little twinge at my words. Only too keenly I realized that my own uneasiness had made me stress the incident far too strongly to Marion.

"But she came away from the school without my knowing it," Lillian said stubbornly. "What was Mrs. Barnes—"

"That is what Marion fears, that you will blame Mrs. Barnes. Now, please listen to the reason for all this, and be ashamed of your fussiness. It seems that Ronald wired this morning from Yale that he and one of the three boys who are coming for the holidays could get away today. His mother thereupon planned a theater party for the boys tonight and sent her brother-in-law down with a note to Mrs. Barnes asking that Carolyn and Marion be permitted to come home today. You know Helena is a bit more modern—than you are, Lillian—and believing that you were out at the other end of Long Island, and had not planned to go after Marion until tomorrow, she simply planned a good time for the children, and a surprise for you."

"She surprised me, all right," Lillian said grimly. "And even at the risk of not being 'modern'"—evidently I had drawn blood on that account—"I am not pleased at all over Helene's action, of course, I have to acquit Mrs. Barnes if Owen carried a note from Carolyn's mother. But tell me, why did Marion come here instead of going to the Brixtons? She couldn't have known we were here. But it was sweet of her to take the chance of our coming in earlier. And she has a key. I suppose she thought she could telephone me here at her leisure."

I felt like a small boy wriggling in fear of a thrashing, as I made her the answer which I would have given much to withhold.

"She didn't come here," I said slowly. "I ran across her when I was shopping."

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, November 7

While a very lively state of affairs is presaged from the solar and mutual aspects ruling on this day, yet it may not be deemed entirely propitious. There are hazards and perplexities of various natures, with many annoyances and uncertainties to cope with. Controversies, friction and misunderstandings, as well as financial losses may complicate affairs. Unusual precaution and sagacity are urged.

Those whose birthday it is may encounter a year of many complications and perplexities with misunderstandings, indecision and financial hazards mixing up the affairs, unless wise and controlled demeanor be brought to bear on problems. Things seem to work at cross purposes unless decisively handled.

A child born on this day may be versatile and clever, but restless, unsettled sensitive and nervous. It should be trained in concentration and sticktoitiveness.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Are You "Going Feminine"?

Women are going feminine—but they'll have to go a long way before they get there.

They have doffed themselves up in bangles and bracelets, petticoats, frills and peplums, and fastened funny little doo-dads all over their frocks, until they look like Christmas trees on New Year's morning.

They have let their crowning glory have its own wild way, and then rolled it into a demure little bun at the nape of the neck; let their skirts down to a nice, awkward length, and gone in for puffed sleeves, waistlines and Laura Jean Libbey shoulder-bows.

And all this after a summer in suntan backs and mannish pajamas!

But, if they want to keep "in character," they'll have to make a much more radical gesture.

They'll have to stop saying "Damn!" at the discovery of a run in the stocking, and begin saying, "Oh, dear!" or "Oh, bother!" or "Heavens!"

They'll have to sneak upstairs and puff their cigarets out of the bathroom window, as Mother did when she was a girl. And to talk about "sex" and "blessed events" only in hushed whispers behind their fans.

They'll have to give up hiking and golfing and petting, and take up tatting and burnt-wood for exercise.

They'll have to wipe off the war paint, desist from powdering their noses or restoring their facial effects in public, and learn how to ask a man his "intentions," before letting him spoil a marcel.

In short, they'll have to crawl back into the cotton-batting and crinoline of the Mauve Decade, or the whole "motif" of the picture will be lost.

Somehow, "Damn" and "Ogosh!" sound like gunshots, coming from the delicate lips of a frilly, mincing, young thing. (Lorelei Lee had the right idea.)

And how WOULD a man feel to have a dainty, ruffled, "perfect lady" rush out, at the sound of his motor horn, grab him around the neck, call him "Old Thing," and ask him if he'd give her a nip from his flask

If you're going to do a thing, do it right; If you're going to wear petticoats and Janice Meredith curls, be sure that you act "in character," or you'll only look like a burlesque or a cartoon.

* * *

Clothes don't make the woman—feminine. Not if she has a hard-shell manner and a hard-boiled soul!

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

The Gracious Sub-Deb

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am going to a dance this week-end with a boy I know, but never have gone out with. When he comes to call for me should I say "It's very nice of you to take me" or shall I wait until we return from the dance?

2. What shall I say when a boy comes to ask me for a dance while I am talking to my escort? Should I say something to my escort?

Sweet Sixteen.

It would be gracious and polite for you to say something of the sort that you suggest. Perhaps "It's very nice of you to ask me to go to the dance" would be a bit better than "take me" to the dance. Don't you think? Or, "I am so happy at the thought of going to the dance," or any other amenity that would make your escort feel your appreciation.

2. The boy who is asking for the dance will ask you first, and then should say something like "Do you mind?" to your escort. Then you say, to your escort, as you leave for the dance, Will you excuse me?" or something that politely "makes your excuses."

The Ice Cream Fork

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Are ice cream forks used for any other dessert besides ice cream?

2. Where is the ice cream fork placed on the table, or is it brought in resting position on the dessert plate?. A. E. R.

The ice cream fork is a particularly specialized piece and is really a one-usage fork. I think that any other use to which this fork would be put would much better be served with a teaspoon or a 5 o'clock teaspoon. Except, perhaps, as a serving-spoon for some kinds of relishes and jellies.

2. Correctly, the silver service for the dessert course is brought in with the dessert. Very often now we find both an ice cream fork and an ice cream spoon. The fork is placed on the left, and the spoon on the right. Then the guest may use both or either, as he prefers. But it is just as correct to serve only the ice cream fork, if you prefer.

Make It Definite

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am enclosing an invitation. Please tell me whether or not it was correct. A says that it was not, that, since it was a 1 o'clock luncheon, I should have had the word "luncheon" on it. B says that "1 o'clock" was sufficient. Please tell me who is correct. READER.

I agree with A—that you should have written the word "luncheon" on your invitation. Of course, the words "1 o'clock" would, as you say, probably carry their own luncheon invitation. But in invitations to meals it is correct, and often essential, to state the meal.

Tell It to Sally

By SALLY MARTIN

Is Unrequited Love Enough to Send the Ship of Dreams Floundering in Permanent Despair?

World, meet "Crippled Heart."

There is, however, nothing crippled about his vocal chords, and he's using all of them to tell about his Hopeless Love. Whereupon, you're supposed to break right down and have a good hard cry with him.

Well, you can if you want. But personally, I think he's getting a big wallop out of his home-made Talkie, and my sympathies are all with the pestered lady.

Dear Love Sage:

"You seem to solve so many strange and terrible problems, that I am moved to bring you mine.

"Do you believe it possible for one human being to love another above anything and everything else in life? Do you, dear adviser, believe it possible for one to love so deeply, so sincerely, so intensely, as to suffer a hell of torture, because that love is not only unrequited—but completely ignored.

"Then look on me! I am one who has fallen in love like that. Hopelessly in love. For months now, I have been suffering an anguish of heart and mind that is utterly indescribable. I never dreamed that any human creature could endure the torture that I am going through, and survive.

"Yes, I love a tiny bit of a girl . . .adore her. . .worship her. I worship at the shrine of her delicate loveliness, her simplicity. . .Whatever it is that a girl possesses that intrigues a fool like myself. And she won't listen. Won't understand. I didn't want to fall in love with her. But she goaded me on. . . let me take her out that 'first time,' just for the thrill of it. And since then I have been like a madman. . .loving, adoring, a tiny, heartless goddess.

"I worship this Angel. Were I given the power, I would make her a Queen! But when I try to tell her how I feel, . .how she means the world to me. . .how I am in Hell when I have to do without her Saintly Presence. . . she won't listen to me. Won't believe me. She just lets me writhe in the agony of my adoration, and ignores me.

"And when I still try to express the maddening message of my heart, in spite of her coldness, she becomes exasperated, and tells me that I can never be more than 'just a friend.' To think that a human could suffer as I do . . and . . . dare to live!

"Oh, Sally! I can't bear it! I can't go on like this . . . I can't live without her! Each day without her seems a year. Each day, when I wake, I groan at the impossibility of it all. A man, you say, sheds tears at only rare intervals. I would that she could be enriched with a dollar for every tear I have shed through the Hell of wanting to be near her, and not being able to. And she won't believe me! Won't even listen to me!

"I dare not commit suicide. Not because I am afraid, but because it would hurt her. But I am just waiting until death opens his kindly arms to receive me. I cannot live, without her. What can I do to end this terrible torture? I won't give you my name, dear friend. I'll just sign myself

"CRIPPLED HEART."

So you can't live without her, eh?

Well, it sounds to me, Brother, as if you didn't have much to say about it. If this girl doesn't love you, she doesn't, and that's that. And she has a perfect right to tell you so . . . just as you would have a right to tell her so, if the tables were turned.

But that point of view never seems to occur to you enamoured gentlemen. You think that if you decide to go sparklets over a female, it's up to her to reciprocate . . . and that she commits a felony if she doesn't. Get over it! A lady is under no obligation to fall for you just because you decide to worship at her shrine. And moreover, if you keep it up, she has every reason to be peeved.

Love can become just as much of a public nuisance as any other disturbance of the peace.

As a matter of fact, you're not in love at all. Yes, I know you think you are—and you're sure that this is Big Time suffering. But suffering is the best thing some of us do—and you are wallowing in a record orgy of it. You're as surely on a jag as though you were full of gin—and, despite your yelps of agony, you're getting a big bang out of seeing yourself sizzling in your self-made romantic hell.

Snap out of it. Or, if you can't snap, go somewhere else and do your yelping, son. Hollywood, f'rinstance. They buy acts like yours down there.

How to Keep Well

Help Stamp Out Dread Diphtheria.

Tragic indeed is the toll of little children who have succumbed to diphtheria in days past. Thanks to the discovery of toxin-antitoxin, the child of today can be made safe from this dread disease.

DR. COPELAND

Diphtheria is a disease most prevalent in the fall and winter months. While it is more apt to occur where the sanitary conditions are not good, yet it attacks the child of the slums and the child of the rich alike. It strikes most cruelly at the children between the ages of 9 months and 10 years.

Every parent should realize the importance of making his children safe from the contagion of diphtheria and scarlet fever. This is done by means of the toxin-antitoxin vaccination.

This treatment for preventing diphtheria is a simple, harmless and painless vaccination. It means but three visits a week apart to your family doctor or to some local health station. If you have no family doctor, the public health stations give treatments free of charge.

New York City and probably every large city in the United States is carrying on an active campaign against this dreadful disease. There is every hope that in years to come it will be stamped out forever. In the City of New York during the last year 500,000 school children have been given this preventive treatment against diphtheria with great success.

One of the tragic things about diphtheria is that even if a child survives a serious attack of the disease he may be left with some serious heart or kidney trouble or some other defect. When a child has been ill for a day and the case is diagnosed as diphtheria he should receive the antitoxin treatment immediately, or at the latest on the second day of the disease.

No disease shows such extremes of mildness and of malignancy as diphtheria. Every parent should realize the needless tragedy of this disease. It is most unwise to take any chances of contagion when such a simple preventive measure is at hand as the antitoxin treatment.

If you have a child under school age in your household I urge you to talk with your family doctor or your nearest health officer concerning this important subject. You cannot do a finer thing for the child's welfare.

Science has lifted diphtheria out of the unknown, until now it is one of the best understood of diseases. Suffering and death can be prevented in the case of thousands of our little children. Will you not heed the call to safety for your child?

Lovely hair!

Modern hair dressers add beauty to your hair by graceful lines and contours. It is just as important to keep your hair soft, lustrous, abundant, rich in color.

Millions of girls and women are doing this at home with the easy help of Danderine. It is so simple to use. All you do is put a little on your brush each time you arrange your hair.

Instantly Danderine brings out the natural color of dingy, lifeless hair; makes it more sparkling and lustrous than brilliantine; makes it easy to manage; holds it in place.

The consistent use of Danderine dissolves the crust of dandruff; stops falling hair; tends to make the hair grow long, silky and abundant. Five million bottles used a year!

ROBIN HOOD

SYRIA MOSQUE

A large and good-natured audience came to Syria Mosque last night to hear the Syria Players in a revival of the old favorite, Reginald DeKoven's Robin Hood. The operetta was staged under the direction of John L. Rodrigues and bore throughout the Syria mark of efficiency.

J. Fred Lissfelt

The performance had all the features of good amateur plays: unusually good voices, new and well-set scenery, fresh costumes and an orchestra that dragged enough to take away some of the life, the brisk spirit so essential to comedy. This latter fault will doubtless be remedied in the two performances to come tonight and tomorrow.

Prominent in the cast were Emma Belle Weinman as Allan-a-Dale, Gladys Menges as Maid Marian, and Zoe Mothersbaugh as Annabel. The comedy was in capable hands; Burton Mustin playing the sheriff; Edgar Hicks, Friar Tuck, and Dr. Russell Kirk, Little John. Vincent Kroen's tenor filled the requirements of Robin Hood, and Russell Mitchell, as Will Scarlet, displayed an excellent quality of voice and speech. The chorus should move more freely, it would then appear to enjoy its singing more.

WELFARE DRIVE RECRUITS 8,000

Nearly 8,000 volunteer workers, on November 12, will open the drive to secure $1,520,248, the budget for the coming year of the Welfare Fund to carry on relief work for 39 organizations.

Many clubs have their plans for the campaign already under way. This year's relief work is to extend to all parts of the county. It was announced at Welfare Fund headquarters that the expenses for administration and conducting the campaign had been reduced to 4.6 per cent of the total money received.

Announcement in churches, theaters and over the radio will help to carry the appeal to the public. Yellow hat feathers and window stickers will indicate that individuals and families have subscribed. Flags bearing the Welfare Fund insignia and placards also will be used to call attention to the campaign.

BIRTH CONTROL BOARD MEETS

The scope of the Birth Control League of Allegheny County is to be presented and discussed at a luncheon of the league members to be held the latter part of this month, it was decided at a meeting of the league's executive board last night in the home of Mrs. Raymond M. Kaufmann, 1925 Wightman street. Mrs. Kaufmann was named chairman of the committee to arrange the luncheon.

Prof. Roswell H. Johnson, who last week attended a meeting of the executive board of the State Federation of Birth Control Leagues in Philadelphia, gave a report of the meeting. H. C. Westervelt, president of the league, presided.

PRESCRIPTION for Constipation tested by 47 YEARS' PRACTICE

THERE'S one way to help the bowels that is safe, and sure. It empties them of all the poisonous waste without doing any harm. Its action is thorough but so gentle that it never causes the least discomfort.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin always does the work, and it leaves you feeling fine. You can take it freely, reducing the amount as the bowels grow stronger.

If you feel sluggish, can't eat, have dull headaches, feel tired, weak and run-down, this famous doctor's prescription will help get rid of the waste that is probably clogging your system. If the children have coated tongue or bad breath; if they seem bilious, fretful, upset, give them a little Syrup Pepsin, too. It tastes so good they'll like it, and it can't hurt them. Its gentle aid is ideal for women.

By taking a little at those times when they are most likely to be constipated, they can avoid much discomfort. Its mild but thorough action commends it to older men and women, too.

Dr. Caldwell specialized on the bowels. His prescription of laxative herbs, pure pepsin and other ingredients has been tested by 47 years' practice. Get a bottle from your druggist. Take some next time you feel the need. Then you'll know why "Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin" is the family laxative of millions.

PROLONGS LIFE OF SILK HOSE

All women will be interested in the recent discovery of a leading New York fashion expert. She learned that besides perspiration, all acid in-skin germicide, absorb an oily secretion from the cutaneous glands that causes silks to rot.

You don't appreciate how much soap and water fail short till you make this Energine test. Have worst, too, from every pair of hose. And don't forget that millions use Energine daily for quick removal of dirt and grease spots from suits, hats, dresses, gloves, shoes, etc. Large can 35c. Get Energine today.

FAMOUS ACTOR TO GIVE MACBETH READING ON AIR

The Loudspeaker

Prohibition Shy, Two Piano Teams, Air Premieres, Symphonics Bow.

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—Oceans of words pour daily out of the loudspeakers—words on party and prosperity, Communism and food, fashions and crime, health and exploration, religion and night life, but the radio magnificence still shy at prohibition.

It is difficult to understand. The most controversial subject in the republic, the most discussed in and out of print, responsible for the greatest piece of magazine promotion in our time and only silence greets it on the nation-wide chains!

Yet, it seems to me, nothing would so stimulate broadcasting, increase the sale of sets and keep radio persistently in the front news pages as prohibition were it debated by Smith and the Bishop, Wadsworth and Wilson, Raskob and Ford, Warner and Jones, Du Pont and Sloan, Beck and Volstead.

Every Station Has Its Two-Piano Team

Scarcely a radio station now remains unrepresented by a two-piano team. They possess the dizziest fingers on the microphones. The millenium will arrive when they fail to keep in unison.

Of all the piano teams, that of Ohman and Arden reaches the most ears, probably because it was the first in the field and is the best known. Roxy was responsible for the vogue. He introduced Ohman and Arden to his deep-seated customers several years ago to such success that the pianists were summoned by Gershwin to play between the acts of his girl-and-music shows.

Ohman and Arden not only made it easier for theatergoers to remember Gershwin's melodies, but for a time succeeded in putting a stop to the silly rush to the sidewalk cigaret.

In their efforts to track down symbols of an earlier America, the radio rulers might concentrate a little more on those men—there must be some living—who drove stage coaches over the perilous plains. The stage coach drivers might lure listeners now yawning over the commonplace exploits of dope-fed gangsters.

What appeal could there be in racketeer tales of machine guns and bullet-proof windshields when the stage coach is approaching the bend in the river and the James boys are on the loose?

Irving Berlin's latest songs are invariably heard first on the air. Words have been set to Ferde Grofe's "Mississippi Suite." Nothing daunts the rhymsters of radio. It wouldn't surprise me to know they were busy fitting lyrics to Stravinsky. Of all the musical historians who hunt down the origins of popular tunes, none is more industrious than Sigmund Spaeth. The broadcasters ought to give him an hour to present his amusing researches. Tammany is the first political organization to engage a dance orchestra—Earl Carpenter's band—to make a musical talkie short for use between speeches.

Symphonies Bow to 'Turkey In Straw'

The higher browed musical organizations are finally running "Turkey in the Straw" through their fiddles. The most definitely American tune in the whole history of the republic has waited long outside the doorsteps of the symphonic maestros. Even Damrosch passed it by without speaking. Yet, its picturesque rhythm will live longer than any other native melody with the exception of "Home Sweet Home" and "Swanee River."

One of the most complicated and yet zippiest of cure current jazz tunes is "Fine and Dandy." Kathryn Meisle, high on the payroll of the Chicago Opera, calls the practice of singing opera in a foreign language "ridiculous snobbery." British announcers really don't need to identify their broadcasts. American ear-cuppers know they have tuned into a London speech by the frequent cries of "Hear, Hear," that assail them.

Of all voices that have crossed the sea that of Premier MacDonald is easily the best in quality of tone and delivery displayed. A slight Scotch burr even adds to his microphonic manner. MacDonald has been heard a half dozen times in America in the past year.

Louis Reid.

"I go, and 'tis done; the bell invites me. Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell That summons thee to heaven, or to hell."

These oft quoted lines from the second act of Macbeth are to be dramatized with incidental music by Dennis King, famous actor, when he takes his cue in the radio theater tonight. No doubt we shall hear the stroke of the bell which summons Duncan "to heaven or to hell!" In extreme contrast, Mr. King is to do Elizabeth Barrett Browning's "How Do I Love Thee" poem, accompanied by music of Grieg's "Ich Liebe Dich." WCAE is the station at 10 o'clock. Victor Herbert's three-act comic opera with Elizabeth Lennox in the role of Dolores is a KDKA feature at 10:15. Pitt Finds Star Guards. | Oldest Player to Pass.
Monaca Boys in Duel. | Army Loses Letzelter.
Football for Charity. | Calling of Penalties.

RIVAL LINES PROMISE CLOSE BATTLE

INDICATIONS OF THE early season that the annual football meeting of Pitt and Carnegie Tech would find the Plaid holding a decided advantage in the line have not been borne out by developments. The Panthers have presented in that department far greater strength than was anticipated, and the probability that Dr. Sutherland's forwards will come close to holding their own with the Tartan wall, where previously it looked as if they might be outmatched, strengthens the prospect that the big battle at The Stadium on Saturday will be anybody's fight right up to the finish.

Ernest Lewis

The fact that Pitt is stronger in the line than the season's advance dope indicated is due mainly to the discovery and development of top-grade players at two positions for which it was feared there would be a lack of satisfactory material. The guard posts are the places in question. Before the campaign opened it appeared that the Panthers might be a bit weak there, but on the contrary, thanks to Sutherland's able coaching of the candidates for the position which he used to play himself, they have come up with enough high-class talent to insure those jobs being as well handled as any others on the team.

INSTEAD OF BEING shy of good guard material, Pitt now has a wealth of it, with no fewer than four capable performers. The leaders at present, and the two who will start against Carnegie, are Ernest Lewis, of Steelton, and Walter Milligan, of McKees Rocks. Lewis was a stand-out in the Nebraska game last Saturday, and Milligan is keeping right up with his pace. Lewis was a backfield prospect in his early days, and Milligan played center as well as guard at Kiski, but both are now working like finished guards.

With Lewis and Milligan flanking Ralph Daugherty, Pitt is about as good as they come in the center of the line. The guard replacements also are above the ordinary. Hart Morris, of Bellaire, O., showed lots of ability before injuries put him out of commission, and Walter Babic, of Duquesne, a former tackle, has developed into as fine a guard as can be found on the average team. The tussle between the rival walls is likely to be one of the high spots of the Panther-Plaid argument.

IT ISN'T OFTEN that two boys hailing from the same town are found playing the same position on opposing teams in one of college football's most important annual fixtures.

There have been few instances of the sort since Yale and Princeton presented the most unusual case of all 10 years ago, when two brothers, the Callahans, not only were the opposing centers in the Eli-Tiger game of 1920, but also were the rival captains.

John Karcis

ONE OF THE rare duels between fellow townsmen will be a feature of the tilt between the Panthers and the Tartans. No matter which side wins, Monaca will get some glory out of it, as both John Karcis, Carnegie fullback, and Franklin Hood, playing the same position for Pitt, are products and residents of that borough. Both attended Monaca High School, though Hood completed his preparatory course at Bellefonte Academy. Jimmy Clark will start at fullback for Pitt against the Shibos, but Hood probably will be in there before the finish to fight it out with Karcis, leaving the fans of the thriving Beaver County town divided in their team sympathies.

THE POPULARITY OF the game between Carnegie Tech and W. & J. as the wind-up number of the football season here on November 29 was great enough in the first place to assure a large attendance, and it will be increased vastly by the fact that the contest is to be played for the benefit of the needy unemployed.

The staging of the game for charity is a praiseworthy gesture by three schools. Carnegie and Wash-Jeff will turn over to the fund for the needy all receipts in excess of playing expenses, and Pitt donates use of The Stadium for the occasion. In view of the worthy cause, and the generous act of the three schools, the fans no doubt will do their share toward making the game the financial success it deserves to be.

MEANWHILE THERE IS a word of commendation coming to Duquesne University, too, for its splendid offer to give the services of its team in any post-season game that can be arranged for the benefit of the same fund.

As soon as some other college comes forward to make a game possible by accepting Duquesne's offer, a second attractive charity contest here will be assured. College football in Pittsburgh is not running second to that of any other city in lending itself to the cause of the needy.

Cy Williams

THE OLDEST PLAYER in the major baseball leagues outside the pitching department will pass out if the plan to make Cy Williams manager of the Allentown Club in the Eastern League is put through. The veteran outfielder of the Phillies will be 42 on December 21, and has been in the big show since he went to the Cubs from Notre Dame in 1912. Only two men in the majors, both pitchers, are older than Williams. They are Jack Quinn, of the A's, who is 45, and Urban Faber, of the White Sox, who is Williams' senior by less than four months. Bullet Joe Bush, former major league pitcher and a Pirate for a short time, resigned the Allentown managership after winning the pennant this year to take advantage of a chance to go to a larger league. He says he has two offers, one to manage a Southern Association club and the other to become coach of a major league outfit.

IT IS EXTREMELY improbable that Cy Letzelter, former star gridder at Carnegie Tech and now backfield ace of the Army team, will be able to play for West Point against Illinois on Saturday. Letzelter's ailment has been found to be a streptococcic throat infection, he is under the care of a specialist as well as the regular staff at the Post Hospital, and it is announced as unlikely that he will be discharged this week.

According to the doctors, Letzelter's case is an isolated one, no symptoms of a similar infection having been discovered among the other players on the squad. At that, two additional regulars may be lost to the Army in the game against Illinois from other causes, as Carlmark, veteran end, and Hilsinger, hefty tackle, are nursing severe injuries.

WHEN A FOOTBALL game ends in a tie, it is customary for the rival captains to toss a coin to decide which team shall get the ball as a trophy. But after the drawn battle in the Harvard Stadium

Pittsburgh Promotes Progress.

You can kick it around that it does.

While other big cities are talking around in circles about arranging football games for the benefit of the destitute unemployed, Pittsburgh has gone to bat with little fuss or flurry and put across its big benefit plan within a few short hours.

C. Overend.

Shortly after the writer, in yesterday's Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, proposed that a benefit game be arranged in Pittsburgh to alleviate the suffering of the needy this winter, Carnegie Tech, Pitt and W. & J., got together and arranged to turn over the receipts of the Carnegie-W. and J. game scheduled at the Stadium on November 29 to a fund to be handled by Mayor Charles H. Kline and the City Controller, and City Council immediately passed a resolution indorsing the contest as a civic proposition, calling on the Mayor to issue a proclamation acclaiming the worthy project and urging all and sundry to get behind it and promote the sale of tickets.

COUNCIL ORDERS TICKETS

The nine members of City Council started the ball rolling by ordering 10 tickets each at $3.

Under the arrangement, Pitt will donate its rental fee for the Stadium and Carnegie and W. & J. will play for a nominal sum, representing bare expenses, turning over the balance to the fund.

Meanwhile, Duquesne University, answering the call, is anxious to do its bit and has announced through Graduate Athletic Manager John D. Holohan that it will play a post-season game with any team here gratis. Efforts are being made to line up a foe for the Bluffites for a game to be played at Forbes Field, probably on Friday night, December 5, or Saturday afternoon, December 6.

The present drive to arrange benefit games had its counterpart during the World War, when Pitt met Georgia Tech here and other contests were staged throughout the country for the benefit of the United War Work Fund. Boxing shows also were staged to raise funds in the emergency.

OVEREND SHAPES PLANS

Credit for converting the Tech-W. & J. contest into a benefit affair goes to Clarence Overend, graduate athletic manager of Carnegie Tech, who had been thinking over the idea for some days and hastened to close the deal when the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph proposal was made yesterday. The matter came before the athletic council of the University of Pittsburgh, in session at the Duquesne Club, shortly after noon and was indorsed there, closed by telephone with W. & J., and rushed through City Council by President John Herron.

Council's resolution on the game follows:

"Whereas the entire country, as well as the city of Pittsburgh, is suffering from the fact that a great deal of unemployment exists and everywhere valiant efforts are being made to alleviate this situation, and whereas the authorities of the Carnegie Institute of Technology and Washington and Jefferson College have consented to permit the football teams of these two colleges to play a game of football at the Stadium, which the University of Pittsburgh has consented to furnish for this purpose, and whereas the net proceeds of this game are to be donated to the needy unemployed through the agency of a committee appointed by the Mayor in conjunction with the City Controller, now, therefore, be it resolved that the Council of the City of Pittsburgh does hereby

Pitt, Tech Bands To Entertain at Grid Battle

The University of Pittsburgh's R. O. T. C. organization of 500 members, the 120-piece University Band and Carnegie's Tech's 100-piece Kiltie Band will furnish entertainment prior to the start of the Pitt-Tech game in the Stadium Saturday and also will perform between the halves.

The R. O. T. C. will take the field at 1 p. m., marching through its military formations after the fashion of the West Point cadets and will break for their seats, also a la West Point, at 1:30 p. m.

Music will be furnished by both the Pitt and Tech bands, which also will go through maneuvers between the halves.

Believe It Or Not By RIPLEY

(On request, sent with stamped addressed envelope, Robert L. Ripley will send proofs and details of anything depicted by him in these cartoons.)

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE GREAT MORMON TABERNACLE—This Tabernacle, one of the largest auditoriums in the world, is 250 feet long, 150 feet wide and 80 feet high. Originally, it was built entirely of wood, with hewn stone buttresses supporting the 150-foot arches which are of lattice-truss construction. Not a single nail was used in this construction, all the woodwork being held together with wooden pegs, strips of cowhide and glue. Incidentally, the acoustics are so perfect in this great building that a person standing in the extreme rear of the building can hear a pin dropped on the speaker's table. EPSOM SALTS WILL LOSE WEIGHT BUT NOT STRENGTH—The fact that magnesium sulphate will lose its weight and volume, but retain its strength and action, is due to water evaporation and the loss of its water efflorescence.

TOMORROW—HOW LONG IS A STRAIGHT LINE?

BERG MAY GIVE DUKES TROUBLE

Berg, versatile right end on the North Dakota University eleven, which clashes with Duquesne University in the latter's last night football game of the season at Forbes Field tomorrow, is expected to give the locals plenty of trouble. Berg can catch the well-tossed pigskin from any angle, and, what is more, he does. The right terminal is just about as dangerous an end as will be found in the country. He is 172 pounds of reason why the Dukes fear the North Dakota passing attack.

Capt. Red Rabbit Jarrett, who tosses the leather just as well as he kicks and runs, probably will open up with the deadly aerial work which the Flickertails are practicing this season. The Army defeat was their first of the season and their initial setback in a long time since the North Dakota University eleven captured the North Central championship for the last two years.

STAR RECEIVERS

Berg and Nip Felber, 180-pound left end, will be the receivers in the passing attack from Capt. Jarrett, principal tosser. Felber is a crack end, but is not considered so dangerous by the Dukes. Yesterday afternoon the Duke varsity worked out against North Dakota plays, with the frosh as their opposition. Plenty of attention was paid Master Berg's berth in the dummy drill, and it can easily be seen Head Coach Elmer Layden has instructed his charges to attach plenty of importance to him.

The plunging, line-smashing end of the backfield quartet which will begin their salvo of shots at the Durable Dukes tomorrow night, is composed of Wex Wesler, at quarter, and Buster Burma, at fullback. Burma is the man who hits the opposition like a cyclone in an orchard, and Wexler is the brainy little 160-pound signal barker. Wexler is the lightest man on the huge North Dakota University team.

HEAVY LINE

The Flickertails may not have the heaviest line in the country, but theirs will do until they find

ARMY DECLINES NAVY TILT

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. William R. Smith, superintendent of the United States Military Academy, last night took cognizance of reports suggesting an Army-Navy football game for the benefit of the unemployed, and answered by saying that the Army could not participate in any post-season game.

"For a great many years, the Army gave 100 per cent of its receipts to charity," said Maj. Gen. Smith, "but of late years this has been reduced to 10 per cent. The money is handled through the Army and local relief societies."

The head of the Military Academy also pointed out that the Army was furnishing work for men on buildings, which are being constructed as fast as funds are available.

"The climatic conditions also are undesirable for a post-season game and any injury sustained by an Army player would mean he would drop far behind in his class work."

NAVY CHIEF WILLING

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The Daily News quotes Rear Admiral S. S. Robison, head of the United States Naval Academy, as saying the Navy was willing to meet the Army in a post-season game for the benefit of the unemployed.

"Navy considers it a privilege and duty to aid the suffering citizens of this country. We are willing and eager to assist in any way possible. If a game with the Army can be arranged or is ordered by President Hoover, as commander-in-chief, Navy will be pleased to play its traditional rivals," said Rear Admiral Robison, according to the Daily News.

PIRATES GIVEN WILLOUGHBY, THEVENOW

was beset with quite a few unpleasant sidelights.

Now that the deal has been closed Pirate fans will foam and argue over the merits of the transaction. This writer has learned that Dick's status in Pittsburgh is viewed from at least two direct angles—there are those who look upon him as one of the most valuable shortstops in the league and sometimes you will walk around a corner from a discussion on Dick's great skill to hear other fans say he isn't so hot, and makes too many errors.

Dick Bartell

BRILLIANT FIELDER

In return for the peppery infielder, it must be admitted that the club has picked up a brilliant defensive shortstop, but one who is hardly in the same class as Bartell when punch at the plate is considered.

Tommy Thevenow is one of those smooth, sure, and often spectacular workers. He will not cover much more ground than Bartell and his arm is hardly as strong, but on the whole, Tommy is one of the most finished of the boys who essay the Wagnerian role. He has a finesse that is missing in many of his rivals.

Thevenow is a bit taller than Bartell, but there is little difference in weight. He is not nearly as aggressive as Richard the Lionhearted, on the exterior, but Thevenow, like Dick, is a smart, headsup artist.

BOTH GOOD ATHLETES

The two shortstops involved in the swap are boys who can look to their good behavior off the field and are generally in top condition. Tommy, at 26, is three years older than Bartell.

Thevenow was seriously injured in an automobile smashup in Florida in the training season of last year. He still bears marks of that accident, but apparently his injuries have not affected his play. Tommy was a hero of the 1926 world series, which saw the Cardinals victors over the Yanks. He remained with the Redbirds during the next two campaigns and was then traded to the Quakers.

Up to this year, Thevenow has been a keen disappointment at the plate. In his previous seasons he was below .240 for a general average, but this year he took a brace and jumped his mark to .288, and he played in every game in which his club participated. If he bats as well for the Buccos there should

Mike Gibbons Loses Fight in Election

ST. PAUL, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Mike Gibbons, who used to trim his opponents with his fists when he was a ranking middleweight, took it on the chin in a battle of ballots Tuesday.

His campaign for sheriff of Ramsey County, which includes St. Paul, against the incumbent, George H. Moeller, resulted in a technical knockout for the one-time "phantom," with Moeller gaining a substantial victory.

Gibbons' platform was "Clean out the gangsters," while Moeller retaliated with "They are already cleaned out."

GAMES TOMORROW.

CITY LEAGUE.
Section I.
Peabody at Westinghouse, Fifth Ave. at Schenley.
Section II.
Perry at Carrick.

With South Hills and Oliver clashing in one of the feature games of the season this afternoon on Oliver High's field, the City League gridiron program gets under way for another week-end. The game on the North Side today is the only one booked, but three tussles will be run off tomorrow, in addition to a number of non-league and W. P. I. A. L. tussles.

IN RACE FOR TITLE

South Hills and Oliver both are very much in the running for the Section II gonfalon, which the Hillsmen won a year ago. A victory for Majeski's eleven this afternoon practically will establish the team as repeaters, and toss them into the playoff for the league title with the champion in Section I.

Tomorrow, Peabody and Westinghouse clash in a feature tussle in Section I, with the Silver Lakers favorites to come out on top. Fifth Avenue and Schenley are to meet at Malone Field. This game appears to be "in" for Schenley, and will advance the Bellefielders a notch closer to the Section title.

In Section II, Carrick and Perry will furnish the action at Carrick.

GOOD W. P. I. A. L. GAMES

In the W. P. I. A. L. a number of good games are listed. Ambridge High, undefeated in five starts and with its goal line uncrossed, takes on Avalon at Avalon. Ambridge has made a great record this year, adding South High to its list of victims last week by a 6-0 count.

Coraopolis meets Bellevue at Bellevue in another game that holds no little amount of interest. Duquesne invades Scott High, of North Braddock, for a game in the evening. Elizabeth will stack up against Jock Rosenberg's Rankin High warriors and Homestead and Braddock renew old rivalry with a battle at Braddock.

acknowledge with much gratitude the great Christian spirit which has prompted this most generous offer on behalf of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Washington and Jefferson College and the University of Pittsburgh, and, be it further resolved, that the Mayor issue a proclamation calling attention to this most worthy effort to raise funds for a worthy cause and that he urge upon all of the people the importance of the sale of tickets in conjunction with this game and their participation in every respect to make this a most successful affair."

SUN-TELEGRAPH PRAISED

Even before the three-cornered arrangement among Pitt, Carnegie Tech and W. & J., was completed, late in the afternoon, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph was receiving congratulations on its suggestion that the local colleges do their bit via football in the unemployment crisis. Telephone calls and telegrams indorsed the idea, and they came in even greater profusion today. Seemingly every red-blooded sports fan is keen to contribute his mite and needs only the opportunity to buy a ticket for the big event.

The plan of Overend is a master stroke. In view of the Plaid's inconsistent performance so far this season and Wash-Jeff's weak schedule, the game, following two days after Pitt's Thanksgiving Day battle with Penn State at the Stadium, did not figure to be a heavy attraction. Now, however, it will not be played in vain. The benefit angle is the greatest ballyhoo tonic it could receive, and all sides are pepped up. With a big, colorful crowd sure to be there, both teams figure to be keyed up to the end that a hard, close and worth-while battle may result, after all.

The Pitt athletic council, at its meeting yesterday, respectfully turned down the tender of a post-season game with the University of Utah at Salt Lake City, explaining that post-season games are against its policy except possibly in the case of a Tournament of Roses game or some other equally important or attractive feature.

PROS JOIN MOVEMENT

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—Professionals have joined the parade of athletes eager to participate in charity contests for the benefit of New York's unemployed.

Tim Mara, owner of the New York football Giants, offered to donate the services of his team for a benefit game with any college eleven, preferably New York University. He pointed out that the novelty of a clash between a crack professional team and a leading college eleven to settle the long-disputed question of superiority would draw a large crowd.

Jack Curley, wrestling impresario, who has a number of former college gridiron stars in his collection of grapplers, offered to pick a team for a post-season football tilt.

Sport Vignettes

Of course, you didn't know it, although you might have guessed it, but Robert L. Ripley, who brings his Believe It Or Not cartoons to you every day, including Sundays, through the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, owns the most amazing library in existence . . . . Rip estimates that the files in his rooms at the New York Athletic Club contain proofs of more than 100,000 queeriosities, as he chooses to call his quirks of fact and nature, which have not yet been used . . . . These proofs cover a range of subjects that cannot be duplicated in all of the libraries of the world because of their very odd nature.

Very unusual, indeed, has been the career of this brilliant Ripley man . . . . In his time he has been a baseball player, vaudevillian, lecturer, artist, writer, movie star and many other things, and now he adds to his accomplishments as a bird trainer. . . . . He has a pet parrot which he has taught to play handball. . . . . Lying on its back, the bird will catch a ball bounced to it by Ripley, clutch it in its claws and attempt to throw it back. . . . Verily, all of the Believe-It-Or-Nots are not of Ripley's finding; many of them are of his own making.

Now that Kid Chocolate has lost to both Jack (Kid) Berg and Fidel LaBarba, almost anything may happen in the fistic realm. . . . And, by the way, what has become of the great hue and cry about the fouling situation in the good old roughneck sport? . . . . Did anyone ever tell you that good Chris Von der Ahe, oldtime club-owner, used to refer to it as the American Leak? . . . . We have the testimony of Jimmy Isaminger, veteran scribe, to this effect. . . . . What mother wants to keep her son from becoming a fighter when she reads in the accounts of Tim Mara's suit against Gene Tunney that the latter earned $2,000,000 as heavyweight champion? . . . . They didn't want their Little Boy Blues to become ice men, either, until a bird named Red Grange came along and dispelled many an illusion.

The correct name of King Levinsky, the sensational young light-heavyweight boxer, of Chicago, is Harry Krakow . . . A year ago he was a $5 fighter; now, as a result of knockout victories over Leo Lomski and Tom Kirby, he's up in the chips and fights Jimmy Slattery tonight . . . He was born of poor Jewish parents in New York and at the age of 2 went to Chicago to live . . . His folks ran a fish market and he was made an employe in it . . . In time he became an amateur boxer and it is said he won only one bout in 55 starts before he turned pro and was a bust there, too, until he suddenly found himself . . . This will be a big Saturday in football insofar as invasion of the Eastern sector by big Mid-Western teams is concerned . . . Notre Dame plays Penn at Philadelphia, Illinois meets the Army at the Yankee Stadium, New York; Michigan plays Harvard at Cambridge, and Ohio State tangles with the in-and-out Navy eleven at Baltimore.

Knute Rockne, it is said, lost money on his first jaunt East with his Notre Dame eleven, taking it to West Point for a game with the Army for a guarantee of $1,800, which was not enough to pay expenses . . . However, the canny Norwegian was looking to the future and he will drag down approximately $125,000 as Notre Dame's share of the game with Penn at Philadelphia Saturday, the contest figuring to draw just a little less than $300,000 . . . It is estimated that the Irish have an excellent chance this season to be the first team to gross $1,000,000 for its receipts.

New York University, whose young team defeated Carnegie Tech at the Stadium last Saturday, is sitting pretty for the next few years . . . It will lose by graduation only Capt. Nemecek and Marshall, ends; Schneider, center, and Roland and Gaudet, subs . . . Howard Harpster and Dike Beede, who starred together for two years in the Carnegie Tech backfield, meet as rival coaches when their Geneva College and Westminster College elevens clash at New Wilmington Saturday.—HARRY KECK.

President Glenn Frank said today.

"In view of the expressed policy of the Western Intercollegiate Conference regarding post-season games, and in view of the fact that as a state supported institution, the University of Wisconsin would not be free to restrict the proceeds of a benefit contest to any one city, the athletic council does not consider feasible the proposed post-season game for the Milwaukee charity fund," President Frank said.

The game was proposed by a Milwaukee newspaper several weeks ago. The suggestion met with approval on the part of Marquette football authorities.

COUGARS REJECT BIDS

PULLMAN, Wash., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The athletic council of Washington State College has voted against two suggested post-season games for the Cougars' football team this year.

An invitation to play St. Mary's in San Francisco on December 13 was declined yesterday and the council also acted on a suggestion made in newspaper stories that the Cougars meet New York University on December 6 at New York, the week after their game with Villanova at Philadelphia.

the other one. That's the way the Night Riders look at it after reading the weights of their coming foe. And it has not added to the peace of mind of the Dukes.

This afternoon Head Coach Layden and Joe Bach, line coach, will bring their men out for the finishing touches on a defensive plan against the feared aerial onslaught of the visitors, constituted mostly in safeguarding methods against Berg and Capt. Red Jarrett. If the boys from the Bluff can stop Berg, Burma and Jarrett they will have a good chance to capture the game.

It will be a crippled Duquesne team which faces the men from way out West, where football players are born as well as made. Kass Kovalcheck will be absent from the fullback berth, and absent for the remainder of the season; Sammy Pratt will be out of the right end berth, and sterling Jim O'Donnell, as dependable a tackle as ever played on the Bluff, also will be on the bench. All of these men have injuries which will keep them out for the rest of the year.

HOCKEY PLANS AGAIN ARE REVISED

By CARL W. SHATTO

Roy D. Schooley, president of the Pitt Hockey Club, is just about convinced that it would be a wise move to sign the Secretary of Labor as goalie and two United States immigration officials as defense men for his Yellow Jacket ice team.

The Jackets have encountered some sturdy and determined defense combinations in torrid battles now history, but they have yet to meet a group as tough to get past as are the labor and immigration chiefs.

Schooley's original plan was to have the Canadian puckmen who are to represent Pittsburgh in the International League this season appear here last week. This plan fell flatter than stale beer when the Secretary of Labor's office informed Schooley that his skaters would not be permitted to enter the United States until he had posted a bond to guarantee that his puckmen would not go in for watch repairing, skyscraper building or any other form of skilled labor other than skating after crossing the border.

PLANS REVISED AGAIN

After raising the wherewithal and posting the bond with a Buffalo banking company, the president of the local club yesterday announced that his skaters would leave Toronto Wednesday night and arrive here this morning.

At this stage of the proceedings the immigration officials stepped into the picture and forced a further revision of plans with the announcement that they closed their office in time to go home for dinner, and didn't return to toil until after they had disposed of their bacon and eggs the next morning. They informed Schooley that his icemen could leave Toronto in the evening of he chose to have them sally forth at that time, but that when they reached the border they would be retained there until the next forenoon, when the immigration chiefs would appear to collect the bond.

SPECIAL COACH

And so the Jackets won't be in our midst this morning after all. The new program calls for the puckmen to leave Toronto tomorrow morning in a special coach. At noon they will be received at the border by a welcoming committee made up of immigration officials and the Buffalo Bonding Company representatives. After an exchange of courtesies, the Jacket car will be routed on to Pittsburgh and the skaters will arrive here tomorrow night.

Schooley has chartered the special coach so that his stalwarts can make the trip conveniently and bring full equipment right with them. Under the direction of Coach Charles Reid, they have been working out on Toronto ice each day for the past week, and several score pieces of equipment, as well as the players, are in the Ontario metropolis.

Although the Jackets already are in top condition for their opening game, with the London Panthers here next Thursday night, the workouts will be continued here without delay.

FIVE MORE ACES SIGNED

The list of Jacket skaters under contract was increased to 16 today when Schooley announced the signing of four more forwards and another defense man. Like the boys who preceded them into the fold, they are young, fast and hefty.

Arthur Berlett, a 23-year-old six-footer who tips the beam at 195 pounds, is the backfield addition. He started his ice career with the Kitchener amateurs and played right defense for the Toronto Millionaires last season.

Newcomers Buck Moore and Milton Halliday can perform at either wing or center. Halliday is an Ottawa boy who was with the Toronto National Leaguers last year.

Jimmy Smith and Lloyd McIntyre, right and left wing, respectively, round out the new group. Smith is 24 years of age, weighs 165 pounds and stands 5 feet 10 inches. He graduated from the Kenora amateurs to the Hamilton Tigers two years ago, and was with Toronto last season. McIntyre is a University of Toronto grad who starred for the Toronto Millionaires last season.

LONDON PROTESTS HOLDOUT

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Manager Roy Brothers, of the London Tecumsehs, International League hockey team, announced yesterday that he would ask injunctions to prevent Gordon Brydson, holdout on the local club, from playing with the Chicago Shamrocks in the American League. Brydson was reported to have signed a contract with the Shamrocks yesterday. He said he would appeal to the courts in states where the American League will operate.

School Cross-Country Race Carded Monday

The second annual cross-country run for local high school harriers will be run Monday afternoon over the Schenley Park course.

Williams Laurence, of South Hills High, won the first race, held last year, defeating a starting field of 25 runners, all of whom finished the race. Schenley High's entries won the team trophy.

The event is open only to senior high school runners who have been specially certified by their school physician.

PITT AND TECH PROMISE GREAT BATTLE

By JESS CARVER.

The gamblers are laying off this Pitt-Tech game as if it were poison, which is a pretty good indication that it will be the heck of a swell ball game. By the gamblers, I don't mean those enthusiasts who wager their five or 10 for love of the old alma mater. I mean those gents who figure out all the angles and then offer an apple for a dozen oranges on what they dope as the favorite.

The injuries that have beset Carnegie, meaning the loss of Donnie Fletcher and Bernie Bursio, have not served to straighten out the tangle to any important degree. On paper, the Skibos would appear to be a slight favorite, but with Fletcher and Bursio on the shelf things are not so good.

SITUATION MUDDLED

It has been a long time since Pitt and Tech have met with things as muddled as at present. Here they are, two ancient and honorable rivals, tangling this week, both with a terrible ball game behind them for last week and neither, apparently, destined to get half way to first base for the season.

At the same time, knowing how the two rivals scrap when they are up against one another, and knowing that both hope to salvage something from the wreck they have made of their seasons, it will not be at all surprising if a crackerjack of a football game should develope here Saturday, with two suddenly aroused, potentially power foes, tearing at each other's throats.

After today's workout, the last heavy one before the ball game, the Panthers will be taken out of town to a secret hide-away, and will remain there until shortly before game time Saturday. Tomorrow's drill in the hide-out lair will be just a light limbering up affair.

LINEUP IN DOUBT

Starting lineups will be in doubt until game time Saturday. Unless Bulldog Reider is able to go, Pitt figures to line up as it did against Nebraska. The Tartan setup presents more difficulty. Pete Flanagan and Rosenweig look like the ends. John Higberger and the veteran Len Schnupp have the inside track at the tackles and Hooks Sample and Capt. John Dreshar are the best bets for the guards. Alex Ducanis or Red Jones will go at center.

As for the backfield, you may make your own choices.

Just after writing that Pitt's lineup figures to be the same as started against Nebraska, word comes out of the Panther camp that both Mike Milligan and Ernie Lewis are badly battered up and that Milligan cannot play against Tech. Lewis, with a bum leg, has been unable to even hobble through signal drill this week, and is a doubtful starter for Saturday.

So it looks very much as though there will be some vacancies in the band Saturday. Someone has to play those guards.

The Tartans also are in for a big time today, with some scrimmage likely to be served up by Coach Waddell in a final effort to get the team in trim for the tussle. The Skibos do not plan to leave town, but one never can tell what those Scotch are going to do, and it may develope that Buddy Overend will send the boys away until Saturday.

Wouldn't it be a joke if both clubs should select the same hiding place. What business.

The Tipoff

There are a flock of good ball games to be run off this week. I'd like to see Penn and Notre Dame in Philadelphia, or Michigan and Harvard at Cambridge. This last one should be a dog fight.

Despite its fine showing in whipping Kansas, Ltd Wray's Penn eleven is not conceded much of a chance against the Irish. Kansas was big enough, and tough enough, but it wasn't any too fast.

Besides, the Red and Blue was pretty badly used up in landing its triumph, and a used up eleven is a poor bet against the Irish. Rockne's club came out of its session with Indiana last Saturday in fine trim, and is very anxious to turn on the power against Penn, seeing as how the game in Philly will make the first and only appearance of the Irish in the East.

Locally, the Geneva-Westminster game at New Wilmington looks like a very good thing. The Covenanters and United Presbyterians have been rivals since the time a pair of treys beat aces-up.

In years past, no matter what edge one eleven may have held over the other, the games have been bitterly contested affairs, and not infrequently, has the underdog shaken itself and chewed the ears off the favorite.

Lou Little pulled his annual fast one as he primed his Columbia eleven for the game with Cornell last week and took the Men of Ithaca for a fine gallop.

Little played a six-man line, with a three and two secondary defense against Cornell and so effectual did his defense function that the longest gain Cornell made from rushing the ball was one of 12 yards.

Little and his assistants figured out that Cornell did not have a ball carrier that they needed to fear on shots outside the tackles, so they played their defensemen head on with the opponents and their halfbacks close and a bit wide.

The plan worked to perfection, and when Ralph Hewitt came through with his long goal from the field and a long run for a touchdown, Columbia rode through to a triumph.

TRINITY ROYALS COP

The Trinity Cathedral Royals stepped off to a good start last night when they defeated the United States Bureau of Engineering, 37 to 31, in their inaugural court tilt on the Cathedral floor. The Engineers led, 22-11, at half time. Capt. Fassinger, of the Royals, starred with six field goals. The lineup:

Royals—37.		U. S. B. of E.—31.
Fassinger	F.	Crum
Frederick	F.	Martin
Williams	C.	McCaslin
Garvin	G.	Willman
McCallum	G.	Harvey

Substitutions—Trinity: Glenn, Reidenbach; Engineers: B. Martin. Field goals—Fassinger 6, Frederick, Williams 4, Garvin, Reidenbach 2, McCallum, Crum 2, Martin 7, McCaslin 3, Willman 2. Foul goals—Trinity, 5 out of 8; Engineers, 3 out of 7. Referee—Aubrey Davies.

Majestics Ready To Participate In Benefit

Jimmy Rooney and his Majestic Radio independent football eleven have offered their services, free of charge, with plenty of tackles and touchdowns thrown in, for a benefit football game with any team, college or otherwise.

The Majestics are willing to meet Pitt, Tech or the Dukes any time after the college elevens close their regular season. They also are willing to take on any of the independent or semi-professional elevens in the district.

"We will be glad to meet any team in the district," Rooney told the Sun-Telegraph today, "and will donate our services free. Yes, we'll even furnish the ball and pay the officials. I think it is a great cause and that a benefit game is a fine way in which to raise money for relief of the poor and unemployed."

POP O'BRIEN DIES IN RING

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 6.—(INS.)—Francis P. (Pop) O'Brien, 65, dean of American boxing referees, is dead. He died as he had wished, with his feet in the ring and the howl of a "fight" crowd in his ears.

Pop dropped dead last night at the Henry Houston Post of the American Legion while refereeing a bout in the annual fall amateur boxing tournament of the club. He had just finished the first round of a contest between two youthful all-for-glory leather pushers and was leaning against the ropes in the minute between rounds when he suddenly slumped to the canvas. Two physicians hurriedly jumped into the ring and declared the veteran had suffered a heart attack.

The post chaplain, the Rev. Garrett Murphy, of Holy Cross Church, administered the last rites as the glare of the high-powered lights beat down upon the still form of the popular official. The remainder of the tournament was canceled.

Pop, as the rotund, ruddy-faced ring arbiter was known from coast to coast and in the Dominion of Canada, was one of the greatest and probably best known boxing referees in the world. For more than 40 years he had refereed contests in California, Indiana, Ohio, Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Louisiana, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Michigan and other states of the Union.

O'Brien is survived by his widow, three sons, and a married daughter.

GENEVA HOLDS SIGNAL DRILL

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Nov. 6.—Signal drill and scrimmage occupied the Geneva football squad yesterday as Coaches Harpster and Lovewell drove their men in preparation for the game Saturday with Westminster at New Wilmington.

The work of the tackles has been rather commendable in the Covenanter line play. Flick Cooper and Dick McKee are the regulars, but they have constant opposition from three giants in the persons of George Johnson, Tuck McConnell and Ray Turpin.

Bo McMillin, former Geneva grid mentor, is scheduled to leave his Kansas Aggies team long enough to make a pep speech this morning in chapel. Bo's eleven plays at Morgantown Saturday at the same time as Harpstermen confront Dyke Beede's Titans.

be no complaint. Tommy entered the big league in 1925, joining the Cardinals after being called from their Syracuse farm.

WILLOUGHBY CURVER

Claude Willoughby, righthanded pitcher who also comes to the Pirates in the big swap, will be welcomed by Manager Ens, despite a career that shows more defeats than victories. Willoughby is a sturdy hurler who owns a fine curve ball, among other things. He is 30, and therefore has plenty of experience.

The astrocious Baker Bowl is bad news for any pitcher and coupled with this handicap to Willoughby were the last-place Phillies. He has been with the Quakers since 1925 during which period he won 39 and lost 56 games. Not an impressive record, yet throughout the circuit the players regard this righthander as a clever performer. He should prove an excelent relief twirler here, if he isn't used as a regular.

Fight Results

At Oakland, Cal. — Young Corbett knocked out Farmer Joe Cooper, 1 round.

At New York—Jackie Schweitzer defeated Vic Morosco, 6 rounds.

At Quebec—Benny Brostoff knocked out Lee (Kid) Roy, 10 rounds.

At Denver—Angus Snyder knocked out Cliff Naff, 1 round.

At Reno—Mickey Evans and Lem Salmons drew, 6 rounds.

MALCO, MADGE IN BATTLE AT MOOSE

As the announcer might put it, the usual Friday evening boxing show in the Moose Temple this week will be held tonight instead of on Tuesday or Wednesday, as in the past.

In other words, Promoter Apples Meyers, who is somewhat in the red after having staged five shows so far this season, has decided not to buck the Duquesne University-North Dakota State football game tomorrow night and is looking for a break in the way of a paying attendance by picking an open night. Maybe he'll get it; it's about time the fans were finding their way back to the Moose Temple, where they formerly congregated in large numbers. The address, in case they've forgotten it, is 628 Penn avenue.

HARD HITTERS CLASH

Tom Malco, of Soho, and Larry Madge, of Cleveland, a couple of husky welterweight swatters, meet in the 10-round main bout, in which, according to the law of averages, someone should get hurt.

Billy Brent, of the Hill, and Jimmy Taylor, of Cleveland, middleweights, box the semi-final. Two newcomers clash in the second bout. They are Marcus Noll, of Detroit, and Johnny Greb, of Wheeling, 150-pounders. In the opener, Steve Senich, of Homestead, tangles with Tom Anderson, of the Hill. The show gets under way at 8:30.

Between Rounds

Preliminaries in several of the classes will mark the opening of the Western Pennsylvania amateur ball championship boxing tournament in the Parkinson Boys' Club, McKeesport, tonight. The tournament will be continued through the next three Thursday nights, a large entry list having been recorded.

King Levinsky boxes Jimmy Slattery, Jack Renault meets Otto Von Porat and Harry Ross takes on Harry Dubsky in 10-round feature battles in the Chicago Stadium tonight. Rene DeVos boxes Angelo Civille in New York and Johnny Farr and Freddie Miller clash in Cincinnati.

A full team from the Homestead A. C. will meet a team of all-stars from other clubs in the amateur boxing show to be held in Homestead Turner Hall next Tuesday night for the benefit of the needy of the Homestead district.

Benny McArthur, of McKeesport (It's not Jimmy McArthur, as has been printed so often), who boxes Rattling Geary, of Donora, in the eight-round semi-final to the Paul Pirrone-Rocky Lawless bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, has quite a record and looks like a dangerous foe for the whirlwind Geary. He has beaten Young Joe Walcott and Johnny Smarkey since coming around here and in the Middle West has scored victories over Roger Bernard, Benny Duke, Prewee Jarrell and Terry Lingo, among others.

Jackie Murray, local Negro lightweight, broke his right hand in the second inning of his bout with Hank Sisbarro at Johnstown last Monday night and will be laid up for a spell.

The Homewood A. C. will hold an amateur boxing show in its clubrooms next Thursday night.

Cubs Seek Lucas And Rhem, Report

CHICAGO, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Growing reports of changes among the Chicago Cubs today had it that Flint Rhem, veteran pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals, and Charles (Red) Lucas, another veteran hurler from the Cincinnati Reds, would be purchased or obtained in trades.

Manager Rogers Hornsby and President William Veeck are holding secret conferences daily, but refuse to discuss current reports and rumors.

BURNS TO ENTERTAIN SMILERS TONIGHT

TWO LEAGUE TILTS CARDED SUNDAY

By TOM BIEKS.

Sandlotters will have the Pleasant Valley Smilers-Burns A. A. battle, under the flood lights, to become enthused over this evening at Parnassus High School Field. Manager Jimmy Smith was looking for the best club in the district to extend the Black and White, and feels that Johnny Dunkey's aggregation of Smilers is the outfit.

Burns is keen upon keeping its leadership in the Conference intact. A one-point lead is slim, and Al Dunn, the new Burns coach, has been working the boys hard to get them in shape.

On Sunday two big battles, which mean much in the Conference race, will be played. The Majestic Radios, classed by many as the ultimate champion, will meet East Pittsburgh at the Quarry Stadium. If the big Green machine cops it will be in first place.

REAL GRID TEST

With Levy, Sleepy Glenn, Jimmy Rooney and Harp Vaughan battering the Blue and Gold line, Joe Wambaugh's club should have its greatest test of the season. East Pittsburgh is playing spectacular football, beating West View, deserving an even break with the Olympics, and playing to a tie with Ambridge.

The other Conference battle finds the Ambridge Mystics clashing with Paul Muzzio's West View club at the Park. The Parkers cannot afford to lose if they are to stay in the race.

Muzzio got a tough break in the Weirton game when Mehler was carried off the field. The injured ankle is not responding to treatment, so Mehler hardly will be in the lineup against Pat Comorre's club. The Mystics, with a greatly strengthened club, played a great game with West View in the first game at Ambridge.

MAY CHANGE SITE

Managers Fred Iverson and Joe Wambaugh are getting together to change the venue of the East Pittsbrgh-Olympic game, and take it to Parnassus under the lights next week. This will give both clubs a chance to play at home on Sunday.

Armistice Day is going to see carded many sandlot tilts. No conference games have been arranged, unless Burns and East Pittsburgh get together, but West View will meet the Majestic Radios at Beaver Falls in a night game and Manager Fred Iverson will take his Olympics to Monessen to meet Jack Mier's Olympics at Husker Field.

Jimmy Smith has been trying to find a suitable opponent for the Burns club on that night, but unless the game with the Blue and Gold of East Pittsburgh is changed, nothing probably will be staged.

Paul Muzzio is looking for a big crowd at West View on Sunday. The park manager has installed additional bleacher seats to accommodate the fans. East Pittsburgh also has installed bleachers that will take care of 4,000 fans. The Olympics are idle in the conference schedule, so Manager Iverson booked Glassport to meet the Olympics.

MONESSEN, PORTVUE TIE

CHARLEROI, Pa., Nov. 6.—The Monessen Olympics and Portvue Quakers battled to a scoreless tie under the floodlights at Husher Field, near here, last night, with Chostos featuring for the visitors and Ricci and Edwards for the Olympics. The lineup:

Portvue—0.		Monessen—0.
Disek	L.E.	Ricie
Flynn	L.T.	D. Winstone
Potersnak	L.G.	Checcki
G. Winsel	C.	W. Paul

Krajack	R.E.	Maykovich
C. Winsel	Q.B.	Kuosman

BIG SOCCER CARD SET

WEEK-END GAMES

PITTSBURGH CENTRAL LEAGUE

Saturday—Clan Douglas at Sons of St. George; Evans; Pittsburgh Rovers at Mesta Machine, Martin.

KEYSTONE LEAGUE

Sunday—Primrose at Fintex Shannons Brs., Lumsden; Houston at Hays, O'Connor.

M. & Y. LEAGUE

Sunday—Cratstown at Herminine, Williamson; Clarksville at Fitz Henry; Pohts; Mather at Vestaburg, Rotherford; Elizabeth at Manown, Lyons.

PANHANDLE LEAGUE

Sunday—Bridgemont at Heidelburg, Bryden; Fintex Shannon Jrs. at Gladden, Verish; Reading at Coverdale, Hart; Bower Hill at Mollenaur, McArdle; Horning at Glendale, DeCheck.

Soccer followers will have another versatile soccer card to become interested in over the week-end, when cup and leagues battles are scheduled.

Two games of the Saturday league warfare will be dropped, owing to cup ties and only two games remain scheduled. Clan Douglass meets Sons of St. George at Mellon Field, and the Pittsburgh Rovers tackle Mesta Machine at Homestead.

In the Keystone League, Primrose goes to Shannon Fintex, and this should prove an interesting game. The other session finds Houston hooked up with Curry at Curry Field.

A full schedule is listed in the Mon-Yough and Panhandle loops. The Mon-Yough is flashing some sensational games, and well-posted critics feel that the best soccer in Western Pennsylvania is on tap in this loop.

The Panhandle League has five games, all real battles. President John Smith has called a meeting of that circuit for Tuesday evening at his home in Beadling and all managers should make it a point to be on hand at 7:30.

There will be a meeting of the Keystone League on Friday evening, November 21 at 7:30, at Bridgeville. One protest is up to be decided, that being the Dunlevy protest against Cecil. This is on the grounds of intimidation.

MY FIFTY YEARS IN BASEBALL

By CONNIE MACK,

Manager, World Champion Philadelphia Athletics

INSTALLMENT NO. 52.

After winning four straight from the White Sox on the second western trip of 1928, the Athletics next visited St. Louis, where they maintained their irresistible front by winning three in a row to increase their streak to seven victories.

Connie Mack.

In Cleveland, they annexed the first two games of the series and then, with a record of nine straight wins, they lost the first game of the trip to the Indians.

Finishing in Detroit, the Athletics took the first two games and then dropped the last pair to give them the amazing record of 11 victories and three defeats on this western trip.

In the meantime, the Yankees had been faring badly on this trip and when the two eastern contenders returned home in the East, the bulk of New York's imposing lead in early July had melted.

We put such a dent in that lead that the Yankees' advantage had been shaved to 4½ games when we returned to Shibe Park.

That altered the situation greatly. We now had a chance and our players beamed with confidence.

REDUCE YANKEES' LEAD

I began to do some more tinkering with my infield, first base always being troublesome to me at the time. On August 28 Orwell was replaced at first by Hauser.

Hauser played only three games when he in turn was succeeded by Jimmy Dykes. A little later on, I exchanged Dykes for Foxx, switching Dykes back to third and restoring Foxx to first. That proved the ideal combination and it never has been changed since, except for injuries.

Our long home stand, after we had ripped up the West, was not as successful as it should have been. Still the Yankees were also slipping, and, on September 2, they were only one and one-half games ahead.

We had a setback on Labor Day, When Washington beat us twice. The Yanks split their holiday program and their lead jumped to two and one-half games.

The Athletics were scheduled to play five games in Boston, starting September 6, but it rained that day. The next day we won both ends of a double-header, and, when the Yanks lost their single combat, we went into a tie for the lead.

The team that had been leading by 13 games in July had been overhauled!

FINALLY TAKE LEAD

The next afternoon we captured both parts of the second string double-header with the Red Sox, and, while the Yanks won the single game they played, we were one-half game to the good and in first place for the first time that season.

We had won four straight in Boston, but at great cost to our stamina, for the Red Sox played us hard at all times and we barely won some of these games.

The next day we had to go the Yankee Stadium in New York for another double-header, making three straight twin cards for us.

The boys were tired after this successful but stamina-sapping struggle with the Red Sox and were not at the peak of their game when they faced the Yanks, who had been playing single games while we were messed in double-headers.

I never will forget Sunday, September 9, 1928, at the Yankee Stadium, because it broke all records for attendance in baseball either in a championship game or the world series. The official figures were 85,265 and they never have been surpassed before or since.

BEATEN AT FINISH

This doubleheader had the interest of a World Series all over the nation. In many sections the fans were rooting for us, as generally is the case when a new challenger steps up as an obstacle to a team that has been irresistible for some years.

The Yanks took a decided brace at the right time, and regaining their old stride, they blasted our hopes for the pennant by winning both games.

After being jostled into second place again, we still kept after them, and at times it looked as if we had a chance to overhaul them again, but any day it was necessary for the Yanks to win they won that game, and on September 29 they clinched the pennant, finishing at the end of the season a few days later two and one-half games ahead of us.

Even our fine record of 98 wins and 55 defeats that season wasn't enough for us to capture the flag, for the Yanks won 101 and lost 53.

Long's Sport Comment

Bill Ingram

Ticknor, of course, was actuated by sportsmanship in his act, but some one remarked that he might just as well not toss anyhow, for he hasn't called the turn on the flip of the coin in Harvard's last three games. And the Crimson has not only lost the toss three times in a row, but was defeated in two of the three games by Army and Dartmouth and got only a tie in the other though scoring 13 points.

IF THERE IS one thing that does more than another to spoil a football game for many fans it is the frequent calling of penalties. Competent officials realize that and avoid overdoing it by using common sense in the handling of a game, keeping to the spirit rather than to the letter of the rules. Instead of the criticism often aimed at them they are entitled to a lot of credit for hustling the game along, for they are not as strict as they might be. There are no fewer than 68 offenses for which penalties may be imposed, but many slight infractions which do not hurt the other side are overlooked. Otherwise no game would be finished before dark. As one official points out, for instance, there is an unintentional offside of the linemen's arms on almost every lineup. Bill Ingram, Navy coach, says the most profusely penalized game he ever saw was the 13-to-13 tie between the Middies and Princeton last year. "We were penalized 110 yards in the fourth quarter alone," he recalls. "The game got out of hand. Most of the trouble was due to alleged piling up, and this was caused by ball carriers trying to crawl an extra yard or so after the whistle had been blown to halt the play. It was a terrible jumble. The play finally got beyond the control of the officials, something that I never saw before or since."

FIRST-SACKERS IN MIX-UP IN NATIONAL

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

The first-base situation in the National League has developed into a merry mixup. What With Sunny Jim Bottomley apparently washed up with the Cardinals, Charley Grimm in doubt in Chicago, George Sisler ready to step aside at Boston, and the Reds wandering in the dark in this connection, an unusual condition surely has arisen.

Bill Terry

And the Pirates, too, can hardly be said to be absolutely certain around the gateway, although Gus Suhr is highly regarded by Manager Enos, despite a disappointing summer on offense.

Bill Terry, one of the best all-around performers at the bag in the past 20 years, is the one big bet in the Heydler circuit.

SERIES HURT SUNNY JIM

Lefty Grimm doesn't have to give much to Terry, but Grimm's status is questioned owing to the change in management in Chicago. Lefty was hook, line and sinker for Joe McCarthy; perhaps he will be just as much of a hustler for Hornsby, but that remains to be seen.

Sunny Jim has fallen to low estate in St. Louis on account of his bad slump in the world series battles. It doesn't seem to matter much to some folks when a player stars in the flag drive, if the same lad folds up in the scraps with the American League.

Hornsby might like to acquire title to Bottomley, so that a trade involving the two clubs and Bottomley and Grimm would not be a loud surprise in baseball circles.

SHEELY WITH BILL

Bill McKechnie has at least three firstsackers, a sure indication that he has the job open. Bill picked up Earl Sheely in the draft, which probably means that he has little hopes of Sisler playing regularly. Johnny Neun also is a gateway tender, but 'tis said that Neun doesn't go so well when he plays every day. Sheely may be the catcher for the infield in the next campaign. And what a receiver is Earl!

Dan Howley doesn't have a regular firstsacker. The Phillies have a great slugger at first in Don Hurst, but Don doesn't seem to have the battle spirit.

Uncle Robbie is well fortified at the position when Del Bissonette is well, but the French-Canadian was a sick boy during much of last season. Even in his bad condition, Del was a tower of strength to the Robins.

Pittsburgh Church League Is Formed

The Pittsburgh Church League, a new circuit in local amateur basketball circles, was organized at a meeting held last night in the club rooms of Trinity Cathedral, Sixth avenue. Four teams will make up the roster of the league, including Faith Chapel, First Presbyterian Church, Mt. Troy, and Trinity Cathedral Royals. Play will begin on regular schedule in several weeks.

SHIFTS MARK PREPARATION OF GROVERS

GROVE CITY, Pa., Nov. 6.—Coach Charley Berry is doing a lot of experimenting with his Grove City football squad in preparation for the Waynesburg game Saturday. The latest development is the shifting of Larry Critchfield, guard, to end to fill the gap caused by Herb Shirring's injuries.

Critchfield, a capable lineman, has had the misfortune to understudy two of the district's best guards, Cantoni and Sofish, for the past two years. These rugged Crimson stars have been available for every game, and Critchfield has had little opportunity to show his stuff. Now comes his chance, and last Saturday he looked mighty good for the short time he was in at end. He is big, unusually fast, and the shift may relieve one of Berry's many worries right now.

The backfield situation is still unsettled, with Alexander, Kammer and Pusch trying to shake off the effects of recent injuries. All will be able to start Saturday, it is believed, but none will be in tip-top condition. In the emergency Mike Koma has shown a lot of ability and although he is a quarterback he may be used at half this week, with Rick Thomas calling the signals.

Price Advance May Come Soon in Commodities

By B. C. FORBES

WHOLESALE PRICES are now about 18 per cent below the high level of last year.

It would be rash to conclude, however, that the cost of living has come down as much.

Mr. Forbes

All the decrease in wholesale prices has not been passed on to consumers by retailers. The Department of Labor's figures indicate that retail prices have been lowered not more than 10 per cent.

What is the price outlook now?

LATELY THERE has been a fresh wave of weakness, after a brief period of mild upward movements in certain directions. A pessimistic attitude again rules. One hears little about the placing of large contracts for future delivery, except in copper, now at almost the lowest price in the metal's recorded history.

All grains have fallen to the poorest prices of the season. After its spirited rise, cotton has experienced irregularity. Drastic price-cutting is raging in the oil industry, due to the opening of new wells of abnormal output in certain sections and to the lack of nationwide co-operation among producers and marketers.

Steel prices are weak. Lumber is sluggish. In fact, practically all building materials have become cheaper.

THE WRITER cannot believe that declines in basic commodities already selling below cost of production can possibly go much farther.

AGE-OLD EXPERIENCES will repeat. Extremely low prices always bring production and consumption into balance.

Take copper. Unquestionably copper under 10 cents a pound will be used where some other material would have been chosen had copper been held up at 18 cents a pound. Unquestionably one reason why copper has dropped so far is that producers maintained that artificially high price too long. Since cotton sank to the neighborhood of 10 cents it has been in distinctly better demand. British spinners have been placing big orders. There has been more activity also at home. Indeed, the cotton textile industry has enjoyed betterment not matched in many other directions.

WHEN THE PRESENT fog of pessimism lifts, the price outlook will change. It may change more suddenly and drastically than anticipated. There certainly is room for a very substantial rebound in such commodities as rubber, wheat, corn, copper, silk, cotton, silver, raw sugar, and even oil, although this last commodity may continue demoralized for quite some time.

SOME IDEA of how rigidly consumption has been curtailed in this country since the boom ended can be deduced from what is happening in the realm of savings. Savings deposits in our banks and trust companies increased no less than $267,180,000 in the year ended June 30 last, whereas in the previous 12 months there was a drop of $195,305,000.

Total savings have reached $28,485,000,000, a new peak. As there was an increase of only 5,408 in depositors (making a total of 52,769,175), it is obvious that saving was practiced more intensely. Remember, too, that much less money was distributed in wages and salaries during 1930 than during 1929.

HUMAN NATURE will again assert itself. A period of spending will follow this period of saving. Just what will happen to cause the transformation in psychology cannot be foretold. But something will happen.

(Copyright, 1930, by B. C. Forbes.)

P. R. R. Car Loadings Increase for the Week

Total loaded cars handled by the Pennsylvania Railroad system for the week ended November 1 were 146,938, compared with 144,065 in the preceding week and 176,012 in the corresponding week of 1929. Loaded cars handled from January 1 to November 1 totaled 6,278,489, against 7,368,528 in the like period a year ago.

STOCKS TOUCH LOWS BEFORE RALLYING

Market Braces Itself Against Selling Raids; Industrials Supported

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—The stock market braced itself against further selling flurries today, and even made a few half-hearted attempts to push forward.

The drop into new low ground yesterday appeared to have caused considerable jettisoning of weakened marginal accounts in the early hours of today's session, but only the utilities and specialties were driven much lower. Pivotal industrials were firmly supported. Trading tended to expand on declines and contract on advances, however.

In the utilities, American Water Works, Consolidated Gas and American Power and Light sagged 2 to 3 to new lows for the year, and nearly a score more recorded new minimum prices with smaller loss, but pronounced rallying tendencies appeared in the afternoon.

Several of the rails also sagged into new low ground. This group, however, showed little inclination to recover. Such industrials as American Can, U. S. Steel, Duponi, Loews and National Biscuit sold up 1 to 2 and Allied Chemical more than 3. Burroughs mounted 3 also. Eastman dropped 3½, then recovered. American Telephone touched a new low at 190⅛, then rallied.

CHAINS SHOW GAINS

October chain store sales reports continued to show improvement over September. Woolworth's October volume was 18 per cent above the previous month, but fell 4½ per cent short of 1929. A few systems showed gains over a year ago, but this was largely attributable to increased units. Grand-Silver showed a gain of 13 1-5 per cent over October, 1929, but this year's figures included the Canadian subsidiary. Merchandising issues moved narrowly.

Developments in the petroleum industry reflected continued unsettlement, and Standard of New Jersey touched 51⅝, a new low. Simms Petroleum omitted the 40-cent quarterly dividend and reported a small deficit for the third quarter. Further reductions in crude oil and gasoline prices were reported, with crude now the lowest in 15 years in some instances. The weekly production statistics showed a further cut in crude output, but gasoline stocks continued to gain, showing an upturn of 560,000 barrels for the week. Conditions in the industry appear to be promoting consolidations. Texas Corporation has made an offer for Indian Refining and Tidewater Associated is negotiating for Richfield.

The weekly building statistics showed a small drop from the previous week. Contracts let in the states east of the Rockies in the week ended October 31 aggregated $57,286,100, or $2,438,400 less than the previous week.

CALL MONEY FIRMER

Call money was a little firmer in undertone, the official rate held at 2 per cent, but outside offerings at concessions were scarcer than they have been of late, reflecting the November 1 credit requirements, which are usually reflected a few days after the first of the month.

The Bank of England made no further reduction in its discount rate of 3 per cent, although there has been some talk of it in London. Gov. Harrison, of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, is now on his way to Europe, and Wall street expects that any change in the Bank of England rate would be deferred pending his interview with Gov. Norman.

Bituminous Coal Production Down

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—On the basis of incomplete car-loading reports from the railroads, the National Coal Association estimates the total quantity of bituminous coal produced in the United States during the week ended November 1, at 10,450,000 net tons. During the corresponding week of 1929 the total production was 11,064,000 net tons.

The latest weekly coal report of the United States Bureau of Mines shows the total output for the week ended October 18, as 9,230,000 net tons, and for the week ended October 25, as 10,438,000 net tons.

Indian Directors Accept Exchange

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Directors of Indian Refining Company in a letter to stockholders state they have already agreed to deposit the stock owned by them for exchange for Texas Corporation stock under terms of the offer recently made. The exchange will be on a basis of eight shares of Indian for one of Texas.

Electricity Output Shows Gain in Week

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Production of electricity in the United States during the week ended November 1 was 1,748,319,000 kilowatt hours as against 1,724,974,000 in the previous week, 1,829,535,000 in the like week, 1929, and 1,688,000,000 in 1928, according to National Electric Light Association.

NEW YORK CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—Further selling of the utilities eased virtually every active member of the group into new low ground on the curb market today. Trading was more active than yesterday. The decline was punctuated by frequent wan rallies that failed to have much effect, serving chiefly to slacken the pace.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP.)—Following is he list of transactions on the New York Curb Exchange, giving all stocks and bonds traded in; 00 omitted on sales column of stock list; 000 omitted in sales column of bond list:

General Motors Will Just About Cover 1930 Dividend.

Wall street was not expecting anything more than the regular quarterly dividend, which directors of General Motors Corporation declared after the close of the market yesterday. A year ago the November meeting brought an extra of 50 cents a share, but conditions at that time might be said to have warranted the action taken. The company showed net equivalent to $1.58 a share for the common stock in the September quarter last year, and a balance of $4.96 a share for the nine months. As revealed several days ago net for the third quarter this year fell short of dividend requirements with a balance of 53 cents a share, bringing net for the nine months to $2.68 a share. Indications are that the company will just about cover its dividend requirements for the full year, so that any extra now would make it necessary to dip into surplus account.

In discussing present conditions as contrasted with those of 1929, one of the stock exchange firms which recently advised customers to pick up selected shares on a scale, said: "Last year, fundamentals were bearish and stocks were high. Now, fundamentals are turning bullish and stocks are low. Flamboyant optimism has given way to rampant pessimism. The public was carrying stocks at the top. Someone else is now accumulating them at the bottom. Certainly this is no time to lose one's perspective."

Ten American corporations have paid dividends continuously over periods ranging from 28 to 75 years, according to the November Diversified Shareholder, issued by the American Trustee Share Corporation. The Pennsylvania Railroad leads the list with exactly 75 years of uninterrupted dividend distributions. The others are New York Central, 61 years; Western Union, 57 years; American Telephone, 48 years; United Gas Improvement, 45 years; Standard Oil of New Jersey, 42 years; Consolidated Gas, 38 years; National Biscuit, 31 years; United Fruit, 31 years, and General Electric, 28 years.

The strength of Wall street's position in the stock market is reflected clearly when loans are compared with 1926, when the low record was made. On January 1, 192[illegible] there were 491,615,837 sha[illegible] on the stock exchan[illegible] a market value of $34.4[illegible] At the beginning of Oc[illegible] year, the listings amou[illegible] 1,284,052,185 shares, wi[illegible] market value of approximately $60,143,183,105. Despite vast increases in both the number of shares and the values, brokers' loans, according to the latest Federal Reserve figures, amounted to $2,512,000,000, or only $104,000,000 over the low record of $2,408,000,000 which was made in May, 1926.

During recent reactionary movements, the market did not experience as great a volume of liquidation as on many occasions previously, say market students. At times, declines resulted from a lack of bids for good-sized blocks of stocks. In a number of instances, only nearby bids were in the market, and when those were filled, the selling forced larger reactions than would have come with normal scale support in the issues. That is not an unusual development after the market has enjoyed a sharp recovery. Scale bids normally make their appearance again as prices drop through what were the previous buying levels of those accumulating on a scale.

Weakness in the steel shares yesterday, with Steel common slipping into new low territory, needed no further explanation than was forthcoming in the weekly trade journals. The Iron Age reported ingot output currently down to 48 per cent, against 50 per cent a week ago, when it was suggested that the industry had expected the latter figure to stand in all probability as the low for the balance of the year. Pig iron production for October was the lowest for that month since 1921, and the current rate is about 4,000 tons a day under the pace of last month. Scrap prices still incline to weakness, the average now approaching the 1921 low of 11.50 a gross ton, but finished prices are showing more stability.

ONE RAILROAD SHOWS GAIN IN PROFITS

Bangor and Aroostook Bucks Shrinking Trend In First Nine Months

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER.

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—Percy R. Todd, president of the Bangor and Aroostock Railroad Company, has succeeded in bucking the trend of shrinking transportation profits this year. For the first nine months when railroads generally were reporting spectacular declines in profits, the manager of this New England railroad was revealing increasing profits.

Mr. Rukeyser

The gains were really confined to the first seven months, yet for the whole nine-month period the railroad discloses an increase in net income of $255,858 over the corresponding period of 1929.

Asked to interpret the chorus of pessimism and gloom with an account of his accomplishment under adverse economic conditions, Mr. Todd told me:

"In regard to the first nine months of this company's earnings in 1930, I would say that for the first nine months of 1929 our net earnings, after charges, were $958,493, and for the first nine months of 1930 our net earnings, after charges were $1,214,352, an increase of $255,858.

VOLUME GAINS

"This in spite of the fact that in June, 1929, we included in our earnings $140,000 back mail pay and, of course, had no corresponding item to offset it in June of this year, and also in spite of a decided falling off in business in August and September of this year as compared with those months in 1929; in other words, the gains were not maintained during those two months."

Asked what was the secret of these gains, Mr. Todd replied:

"The gain in net earnings, which was really confined to the first seven months, was due to an increase in the gross volume of business, also to close operating economies, though the expenditure for maintenance was slightly larger than for the same period in 1929, but the operating ratio for the nine months this year was 62.19 against 65.96 last year, and transportation for nine months this year was 23.88 against 24.46 last year. The comparison was not in any way affected by bookkeeping adjustments."

An executive of the Federal Reserve, in deriding the current pessimism, remarked to me that nowadays the public is irritated if you point to any good news. Irrespective of this, a corporation manager, who can enhance profits in a year like this, deserves a blue ribbon. Almost anyone on the job can swim with the flush tides in prosperous years and make a showing, but a management that can buck the adverse tides evidently has the stuff.

SAVE ON BONDS

I find that not a few exceptional companies, which, in spite of adverse conditions in the first half of the year, showed increasing profits, failed to keep up the pace in the trying third quarter of the year. Among the companies doing better than average was the Addressograph International Corporation, which reported gains in net income for the first half of the year, but which, as a result of the third quarter slump, revealed earnings for the first nine months of $1.99 a share on the common, compared with $2.16 a share in the corresponding period last year.

Asked to explain these better than average results, C. R. Battin, secretary and treasurer of the company, informed me that the company saved interest charges this year by retiring debentures and added:

"So far as the rest of it is concerned, we were able to make a good showing for the nine months period as compared with last year, due to manufacturing economies both in cost and efficiency as well as to reduced general and administrative expenses.

The falling off in shipments was, of course, accompanied by a relative falling off in commissions; so that to sum up, you have the question of savings in interest, savings in commissions to offset the drop in shipments."

RETAIN DIVIDENDS

Thus it can be seen that there are instances where enterprising management is retaining dividends for stockholders through zeal in operating economies, which offset shrinkage in gross value of business.

Even where there have been temporary sharp dips in earning power this year, corporations with fat surpluses should hesitate before disturbing dividend disbursements at the present rate. Unwarranted dividend curtailment at this time would merely widen the vicious circle of depression.

In numerous conspicuous instances, surpluses are inordinately large—far above the probable legitimate requirements of the business for contingencies. They were in some instances amassed for special purposes, such as for the purpose of permitting large and wealthy stockholders to avoid high income taxes on distributed profits. In other cases, they were piled up for an emergency. An emergency is at hand, and directors, which have leeway, ought to step lightly in the matter of needlessly omitting or reducing dividend disbursements at this time. This comment, of course, refers only to strong, well-intrenched companies with fat surplus accounts, and with a sufficiently large portion of the surplus in cash and available for dividends.

Fireproofing to Earn Dividends for Year

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

NATIONAL FIREPROOFING CORPORATION will earn its dividends in the present year with a satisfactory margin to spare, but profits will be lower than in 1929. Results for 1930 appear to be exceptionally good when the reduced rate of building activity is taken into consideration.

The company makes a wide range of tile products. These include hollow tile as well as special material for both interior and exterior finishing work. Tile conduits and silo tile are among the special products.

The marketing of new products and the more intensive development of the field for the older materials have made it possible for the company to maintain sales at a high rate in spite of reduced building activity. Production was at 80 per cent of capacity during the eight months of the present year. At present output is at about 65 per cent of capacity.

The company operates 20 plants in Ohio, Indiana, New Jersey and Massachusetts. These are near clay deposits which assure a supply for at least 60 years of operations.

Stocks Yield High Rate

THE 6 PER CENT cumulative $50 par preferred stock and the common stock each pay dividends of $3 annually. The preferred closed on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange yesterday at 33 and the common at 27¾. This indicated a yield of 9.09 per cent for the preferred and 10.81 per cent for the common.

While the company is earning these dividends in a period of poor business for building material, the high yield probably reflects the fact that the common was not placed on a dividend basis until the present year and the record of the preferred stock in the past was irregular.

The preferred stock is convertible into common on a share basis until December 31, 1935.

Earnings Improve

AFTER REPORTING unsatisfactory earnings of only $179,414 or $1.13 a share on the preferred stock in 1927, net profit showed improvement in the two following years. In 1928, $513,084 or 43 cents a share was earned on the common. In 1929, profit increased to $1,368,829 or $10.03 a share on the common.

The irreguarity of profits of recent years makes it impossible to compute the number of times earnings for which the common stock is selling based on the average income for any extended period. The fact that dividends are being earned in such a year as the present is a distinctly favorable indication.

Officials of the company state that business is improving in several sections of the country. In New York sales are gaining. They are in fairly good volume in Boston and Washington. Chicago is lagging, but Detroit is improving in spite of the low state of the automobile industry.

Funded Debt Small

CURRENT ASSETS OF $3,479,881 were nearly 4 times current liabilities of $884,971 at the close of 1929. Net working capital of $2,594,910 exceeded the funded debt outstanding of $2,570,000.

The capital structure was improved last year by the formation of a new corporation to take over the operations of the old company. Stock of the new corporation of each class was exchanged for that of the old company on a share for share basis. The old company had 158,010 shares of 7 per cent $50 par non-cumulative preferred stock outstanding. The new corporation replaced this with an equal number of shares of 6 per cent cumulative convertible stock. This eliminated the danger of legal difficulties over the right of the old preferred to unpaid dividends from earnings for prior years. While the new preferred carries a lower dividend rate it has cumulative and conversion features. The new common paid an initial dividend of 75 cents a share on May 1. A total of 89,226 shares of common stock are outstanding.

Slab Zinc Stocks Take Sharp Rise

Stocks of slab zinc on October 31 amounted to 141,232 tons, against 132,947 in September and 122,636 in August, According to the American Zinc Institute. Shipments during October were 32,655 tons, against 30,173 in September, and 35,775 in August. Production in October was 40,940 tons against 40,485 in September, and 41,029 in August.

Soft Coal Miners File Rate Protest

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—Soft coal mine operators in the Fairmont No. 2 West Virginia group have filed a complaint with the Interstate Commerce Commission alleging the rate of $1.66 a ton on their coal shipped to Lake Erie ports is unreasonable and preferential of mines in Pennsylvania and Ohio. Rates apply on coal shipped to the lakes for transshipment.

He was accompanied by Allan Sproul, assistant deputy governor in foreign functions.

Firestone Predicts Record Business

DAILY TRUE STORY

Cigars - - - Cigarets

"Cigars? . . . Cigarets? . . . Cigars? . . . Cigarets?" The voice caused one to recall the story-writer's pet adjective . . . "velvety."

Morton Gale looked up from his synthetic gin cocktail. The cigaret "girl," he decided, was probably 20.

In reality Janice Rowen was 32. She had applied so much pearl powder, so much mascara, so much lipstick, that one might guess that she was 40, trying to appear 16.

She paused slightly at Morton's table.

"Cigars? . . . . . Cigarets?" she asked, in the same velvety monotone.

Morton stared up at her.

"Your eyes," he said, "are young, but clouded by either sadness or work. Which is it?"

"Cigars? . . . . . Cigarets?" she asked, ignoring his question.

"A half-dozen Crownellas," he said, smiling at her delicate rebuff.

Janice held out the box. Morton slowly made a selection and handed her a $5 bill.

Morton could buy this brand anywhere at 30 cents each, straight, but he made no comment. Being in a night club made him a sucker, as he well knew, and, being that sort of a sucker, he couldn't very well put up a scream of pain at being charged 50 cents straight.

Janice turned to go as Morton Gale snipped the end of his cigar and said, "A light, please."

Beautiful Companion

She turned back, took a lighter from the basket, snapped on the flame and held it for him.

He lighted his cigar. His companion watched, rather amused. She was a stunning woman.

"Now," Morton said, "as to those remarkable eyes of yours—which is it, sadness or worry that clouds them?"

"Don't be absurd, Morton," his companion said.

Janice flashed a glance at the stunning woman, it might have been of gratitude. At any rate, she turned slowly away.

"Cigars? . . . Cigarets?"

She was moving to the next table where a flushed fledgling proceeded to buy imported cigarets for a chorus girl who preferred a very cheap and popular brand, but was ashamed to ask for them.

"Are you in the habit of flirting like that, Mort?" the stunning woman asked him.

She was Mrs. Delroy, his sister, from Houston."

"Flirting?" My dear Ollie, you haven't seen any flirting yet. I wasn't flirting. I was interested in that woman—her eyes were wonderful.

"What was more wonderful was the amount of cosmetics she could spread over one face at one time."

Gale Applauds

They stopped to watch a little dancing girl.

"There's a beauty for you," Mrs. Delroy declared.

"Very pretty, no depth of mind. Her intelligence seems to be in her feet—one wants more than a pretty picture to stare at all the time."

However, he applauded heartily.

A few evenings later Morton Gale came back to the same night club. His sister, Mrs. Delroy, had returned to Houston, husband, children and pretty suburban home.

Morton occupied a little table, alone.

"Cherry," the famous leading hostess of the place, spied him, but she didn't pull any "Welcome, poor fish" stuff on him because she knew who he was.

He bought more of his favorite cigars, permitted himself to be gyped 20 cents on each one, and looked at Janice Rowen.

"I think," he said, as she held the light for one of his cigars, "that it is worry in your eyes. Sorry. Could I, by any chance, dispel any of that worry? Is it a wolf at the portal?"

Janice looked at him a moment.

"Cigars? . . . Cigarets?" Janice had turned away.

A little later, after the beautiful "La Zephyr" had danced, she came over to Morton's table, a pretty cloak about her bare shoulders. She came because she had been so instructed by "Cherry," the famous leading hostess of the place, whose word was pretty near law there.

"Hello, Mr. Gale," she said.

"Hello, little thistle-down."

Janice Rowen lost interest in disposing of her cigars and cigarets and came over quite close to the table. She pretended to be talking to one of the little assistant hostesses, but it was evident she was listening to what Morton was saying to the little dancer.

"I will buy wine," Morton was saying, "and ginger ale. I shall not drink the wine and I advise you to stick to the ginger ale."

"Why, how did you know?" the little dancer asked.

"To remain a marvelous dancer you must avoid these silly synthetic stimulants. I enjoyed your dancing. I shall make you a present—"

"No, thanks—"

"I believe it is expected. By the way, I want some information."

The little dancer seemed suddenly bored. "My life story, I suppose?"

"Dear me, no. You haven't lived life yet and I'm only interested in your clever dancing, I assure you. I want to know who the cigaret girl is?"

"You—you—now why do you want to know that?"

"I like her. I like her eyes. Who is she? Is she married? Tell me about her!"

"She isn't married. She's a perfectly lovely person," the little dancer hesitated and giggled like a school girl. "I'll tell you about her, if you won't tell—"

"Cigars? . . . Cigarets?"

Janice Rowen had turned to the table. Morton saw her swiftly nudge the little dancer and flash a peculiar glance at her.

"I haven't smoked these yet," Morton said to Janice.

She walked away.

"There isn't anything to tell about her—she is just a really sweet and lovely woman, and she sells cigars and cigarets for a living," the girl said.

More Visits

She had to go back for another dance.

Three more nights within as many weeks, Morton Gale went to this night club. On each occasion he chatted a few minutes with "La Zephyr," but never a word from her about the cigaret girl other than what she had already told him.

It was on the third night that Morton had arrived late. A group near him was quite noisy. "La Zephyr" paused for just a moment at Morton's table to chat, when one of the men from the noisy table came along, twitched the cloak down from the little dancer's shoulders and started to embrace her.

Morton arose without seeming haste. He took the offender by the neck and shoved him toward his table so violently that he fell on his face. One of his friends rushed to beat Morton Gale into a pulp. Morton didn't want to be beaten into a pulp. To prevent it he struck the man so swiftly that he joined the first man, who was trying to crawl out from under the table.

A riot started. Morton put an arm about the little dancer, backed into a side hall, slammed two guests and a waiter and got her out to his car.

"You might have been hurt," he said.

Janice Rowen ran up to them.

"Thank you, Mr. Gale," she said, and turned to the girl. "Come on, May," she said.

Morton made them get in his car. He took them home. He found that the famous little "La Zephyr" was May Rowen, kid sister of Janice, who sold cigars and cigarets there solely to watch over her.

"La Zephyr" is no more, now. She is Miss May Rowen, attending a very select finishing school and spending her vacations with her sister, Mrs. Morton Gale.

A COUPLE OF MEINIES

(Burlington, Wis., Free Press.)

"Edna Meinhardt, cashier of the Meinhardt Bank, is the business pride of Burlington, and the fame of her abilities has spread so far that staff writers of several national magazines have come to interview her, only to be turned away. She unflinchingly refuses to pose for pictures. Albert Meinhardt, her brother and president of the bank, is just as reserved... Miss Meinhardt is a member of the Mein-Had Players, which produces its own motion pictures for private exhibition. The 'Mein-Had' is derived from the names of the Meinhardt and Badenoch families. Albert is the cameraman while his sister acts. Their latest production was 'The Topaz of Tia.'"

And if you ask us, Meinhardt is a swell name for a banker.

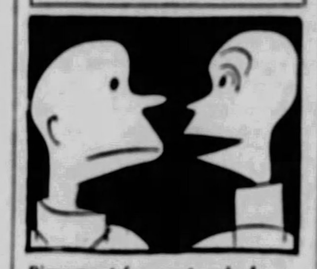
PLEASE PARDON OUR INDIGNATION



Disrespect for courts, alas!
Has reached a most distressing pass,
For disrespect has nestled in
The hearts of certain gentlemen
Who purchase bench work in New York
As you and I go purchase pork.

BULL-ETIN

(News Item.)

"Speaking before the American Federation of Labor the President made it clear that the Government would never consent to lowering the standard of living among working men."

Perhaps the President closes his eyes real tight whenever he runs across unpleasant news concerning recent goings-on in the Post Office Department.

MEN WHO MATTER

This is Alfaqueque St. Sincero Deakes, professor of statistical psychology at any number of places, who has startled educational authorities with his unqualified discovery that if the knowledge of all the college boys of America were placed end to end the bootleggers' telephone numbers would reach from here to prosperity.

TODAY'S OPPORTUNITY

(Lamar, Mo., Democrat.)

"Have you seen the automatic cradle at the Adams Hardware and Furniture Store? If not go and see it. It discounts any and all cradles ever made. It is run by clock work, easily wound up, perfectly safe, it is durable and occupies but little space. In fact, it is a complete daisy."

They Were Satisfactory

Voting Machines Have Been Proved Superior to Paper Ballots.

Voting machines were used in a number of Pennsylvania counties Tuesday for the first time. They gave satisfaction.

Notwithstanding the voters' unfamiliarity with the devices there were no delays, no breakdowns. In Fayette County votes were registered by machine at the average rate of 50 an hour.

Where machines were used the total vote was tabulated and ready for publication within a few minutes after the polls closed.

That is an improvement over the system of counting paper ballots. Where paper ballots were used the result was not known in some cases until hours after the polls closed.

Most important of all, the voting machines made it difficult or impossible to cheat.

Our Vast Resources

It Is Hard to Over-Estimate the Extent of Our Natural Wealth.

Ten years ago geologists told us we were nearing the end of our oil and natural gas supplies.

Fairly definite dates were given on which we might look for the exhaustion of these valuable resources.

Some of the gas companies supplying Pittsburgh issued advertisements advising people to use gas sparingly.

Thanks to new methods of recovery, more oil is being produced in Pennsylvania now than when we were warned of the need of conservation.

And now comes the discovery of gas in territory east of the Chestnut Ridge, where gas was not thought to exist. One well has been brought in in Somerset County, and another in Tioga County.

The geologists are revising their maps.

It is hard to over-estimate our natural wealth.

Bonds for Parks

Taxpayers' Willingness to Spend Money for Recreation Is Encouraging Sign.

Citizens of McKeesport approved on Tuesday a $140,000 bond issue for parks.

Citizens of Bellevue voted to issue $50,000 of bonds to acquire a park.

Citizens of Munhall approved a $650,000 school bond issue with the understanding that part of the money was to be used for a recreation field.

Parks and playgrounds are coming more and more to be regarded as necessities.

But it is unlikely that Allegheny County taxpayers, already highly taxed, would have been willing at this time to spend large sums for recreation if business were as bad as some people think it is.

A Worthy Plan

Mayor of Boston Urges Harnessing of Mississippi River To Increase Its Worth to the Nation.

National emergencies call for measures no less national if the challenge of the emergency is to be met standing. Widespread unemployment resulting from the current depression is no exception to this rule.

With this fact in mind Mayor Curley, of Boston, has urged upon President Hoover a national plan for harnessing the Mississippi River that would make it more than ever the servant and benefactor of the entire household of the nation.

Boston's enterprising mayor would have the federal government expend one thousand million dollars in developing and controlling "the Father of Waters" in such a way as to prevent further flood disasters, provide cheap water transportation, and produce electrical energy at a minimum of cost to the consumer.

Under this plan flood control would be achieved by developing a system of basins along the Mississippi and its tributaries in which in time of flood water could be stored and then released in time of drought.

Hydro-electric installation at the entrance to these basins would permit the development and storage and distribution of power at a fraction of a cent per kilowatt.

By deepening the channel of the river freight could be transported far more cheaply than under the existing expensive rail system, which requires from two to three handlings, makes for delay and is largely responsible for depriving the farmer of his fair share of the profits from his produce.

By controlling the flood waters of the Mississippi and deepening its channel it is estimated that the flow of the river could be accelerated seven miles per hour.

Cheap and quick transportation between the Mississippi Valley and the markets of Central and South America and the Orient, by way of the Panama Canal, and ultimately through a new Nicaraguan canal, would better enable the American people to meet the increasing competition of European countries in those markets.

And Mayor Curley in his letter to President Hoover claims for his plan this additional advantage: Investing one thousand million dollars in a project such as his plan calls for, would make the Mississippi River states so attractive to business and industrial interests that no major concern could forego building its own manufacturing plant in that region, thereby getting advantage of the cheap power and cheap transportation.

At a time when the mind of the nation is fixed upon ways and means of meeting the national emergency which the present depression has created, Boston has sent to the federal city a plan that is certainly deserving of the prompt and serious consideration of the President and the Congress.

There is ample time for the Army engineers, assisted by engineers from city life, to pass judgment upon this project and submit their studies to Congress when it convenes.

Meantime the American people have good reason to thank the mayor of Boston for putting up to the federal government a national plan that would meet a national emergency in a way that strongly appeals to the common sense and national pride of his countrymen.

No Depression Here -:- -:- By Jimmy Hatlo

"Bugs" Baer Says:

The Loud Speaker

Diplomats have finally catalogued peace under the classification of radio entertainment.

Premier Otblott gave us the buzzing dial last week for over an hour. It was a long talk on a short subject.

The Premier says that peace would be great if only for the novelty.

He thinks that Europe can get along very well without our Navy.

We build beautiful boats. In a few weeks they get their keels covered with barnacles. When a wave strikes them they lean over. It's very untidy.

Sir Divots Replace, who is prime mixer of the Polish corridor, also took the overland route to a better merger of international disagreements. Sir Divots said:

"Let's limit the Navy program. Europe is in a tough way.

"We are spending more money than we can borrow.

"When Europe spends more gravy than it can spoon out of the other man's plate, that proves that America is sweeping up its own crumbs for tomorrow's pudding. We regard that as an unfriendly act.

"We are all brothers under the skin. It all depends on who is holding the skinning knife."

Sir Divots then turned out and yelled for the family stepladder. You cannot keep a tree-sitter on the ground.

Good old Ambassadora Zuzz, of the family of the same name, took his turn at the calibrated saucer:

"I loaf all ze Americaines. I loaf everybody. I am ze worruld's greatest loafer.

"But I do not loaf ze Americaine Navy. Eet ees tarrible. Giff me a gimlet and I will show you some vairy foony bubbles."

If the ambassadora doesn't mind we will keep our boats and make funnier bubbles with soap and water.

We must keep our big Navy because a sailor is the only citizen left who has an even chance with a speakeasy bouncer.

Next week the three diplomats will be again on the air with Clarence Darrow in a quartet singing "Your Press Agent is Your Best Friend After All."

THE ROGER BACON CIPHER

By Archibald Henderson

Some time ago, a remarkable manuscript was discovered by a scholar named Voynich. This manuscript dates from the thirteenth century; and considered from any angle is certainly a very extraordinary work. It is strongly believed by some scholars to have been the work of Roger Bacon, one of the gifted forerunners of modern science. If not by Bacon, it was certainly the work of a very remarkable mind, quite the equal of Roger Bacon's.

This amazing manuscript, illustrated with strange drawings, mystic signs, and unintelligible heiroglyphics, is written throughout in cipher. It was studied minutely for years by the late Prof. Newbold, of the University of Pennsylvania. He discovered, he alleged, that the letters of certain meaningless words, when examined under a powerful microscope, were indubitably made up into groups of stenographic symbols. By the use of seven ciphers for successive transliteration, Prof. Newbold finally succeeded in deciphering a certain portion of the manuscript. Death interrupted him in the midst of this work, and the conclusion will have to be done by some other scientist, either one who accepts Prof. Newbold's translation, or makes a new translation of the cipher from a different point of view.

Perhaps the most impressive feature of the manuscript is the remarkable set of drawings, which cannot fail to impress even the casual observer. As Jonathan Norton Leonard says in his absorbing work, Crusaders of Chemistry, "The little female figures are very graphic symbolization of the process of fertilization and pregnancy; the sinuous tadpole-like things are human spermatozoa, for the first time pictured by man, and the bunches of small grapes are various kinds of body tissue, complete with cellular structure and all. Bacon had looked behind one of the most sacred veils of nature."

Even today we cannot fail to be impressed with the three principal works of Bacon long known to us, in the form of the Opus Majus, the Opus Minus, and the Opus Tertium. They were sent to Pope Clement IV, a broad-minded and scholarly man; and were compiled by Bacon in 18 months. They constituted an epitome of scientific knowledge of that day and time; and well filled with scientific speculations, a number of which were afterwards verified—notably in the case of the microscope and the telescope. It is perhaps not generally known that Bacon also wrote about flying machines.

Roger Bacon was fully in line with modern science, in attaching the highest importance to mathematics, as the substructure of other sciences. He set himself against the dead hand of authority—and slavish adherence to the dogmatic pronouncements of past scientists. He was the high priest of scientific rationalism, although his views were much tinctured with religious superstitions and dogma. He leaned on authority when it appeared sound and was beyond the reach of verification.

The cardinal text of his natural philosophy was experimentation. He will be remembered for the saying: Although other sciences, such as geometry, accomplish many wonders, yet the things of most service to the state belong to Experimental Science, which teaches us how to make and use marvelous instruments.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Are married women lazy? Lazier than their professional sisters? Mary Garden said they were. And started plenty!

"She makes me sick," says the misses. "What does she know about work? Look at her! Nothing to do but dress in lovely clothes and sing a few songs. I just wish she had my job for a day! Then maybe she'd know what work was. Why, I'm on my feet every minute—and there's many a night I work till ten, n' after, trying to catch up on the ironing and mending—"

Whereupon her working sister snickers.

"Gwan, Mame, you make me laugh! Say, if I ran my job the way you run yours I'd be fired in a week. First place, you don't run it at all—you let it run you. You've no system—you just go messin' around——"

"Easy enough for you to talk," glares the misses. "You've only got an eight-hour day—then you're through."

"B't I've got to work every minute of those eight hours. Ever count how much time you actually worked? Ever check up how much time you wasted gabbing over the phone to Mabel and Sadie, sitting down, in the middle of your dusting, to read a magazine—or lying down, just because you had a little headache? How long do you suppose a professional woman could hold her job if she babied herself along like that?

"How long would it take you to do your work if you made a schedule and snapped into it the way office girls have to? Look at most of the young married women in this apartment house. It wouldn't take any of 'em more than a couple of hours a day to do everything, if they jumped right into it. Yet, to hear them wheezing around, you'd think they were killed. Maybe you don't think they're lazy."

"Well, if they had two children to chase after, the way I do—"

"Say, lissen, hon—you've used those kids for an alibi ever since they were born. Maybe they were a handful at first, but after the first year or two kids can be regulated, like any other job. Trouble is with you mothers you won't use your heads. You like to sit around and think you're the hardest workers on earth, but the truth is you're a hundred years behind the time when it comes to performance. No wonder the old man falls for the snappy new stenog. Honest, Mame, Mary Garden's right. You girls are lazy! You move your feet, but your heads stand still."

And there, in the vernacular of Tillie the Toiler, you have one of our most pressing and peevish industrial problems.

How do wives stack up as workers in 1930?

Put sentiment aside. Consider wives simply as workers who are performing certain services in return for certain compensation—what do you think of their performance? How does it compare with the performance of the average stenog or clerk, woman doctor or lawyer? Are they intelligent, efficient, conscientious, up-to-date? Or are they stupid, wasteful, untrained and incompetent?

Are wives the world's worst workers—or the best?

Guidance

This much I know, each day I have been led Through calm or tempest, triumph or defeat,
And after clouds and cruel winds have sped,
I have found tranquil skies and gardens sweet.
Not mine to plan my course, not mine to ask
For favors which to others are denied;
But I am grateful for each humble task
Which keeps me still serene and satisfied.

And I am happy for the common ways
Which I with all my fellow-creatures tread,
As side by side we travel through the days
Each to a goal he knows not, safely led.
Through hidden paths, and plans none understand,
I go, secure, my hand within His hand.

Text For Today

What a Girl!

She Fought Bulls So Nimbly.

ANCIENT GIRL BULL-FIGHTER OF CRETE

Study the performance of this girl, shown in outline as she attacks the bull, according to methods on the Island of Crete, in the Mediterranean, thousands of years ago.

The four figures represent the same girl at various stages of her remarkable performance.

Merely killing a bull, which anybody possessing fair agility can do, did not satisfy those Cretans of the Minoan day. They wanted something more exciting.

Girls, especially trained for the bull-ring, were expected to prove to the bull that he was no match for human intelligence and agility.

In No. 4, well balanced, she is leaping from the hind quarters of the bull, ready to begin over again.

She carries no weapon. If she fails in her marvelous acrobatic feat, death is the result.

But death meant little in those ancient days in the Cretan city of Knossos, one-quarter mercantile, three-quarters pirate, marvelously advanced in civilization, with puffed sleeves and bustles for women, copper sewer pipes for palaces, horrible brutality for amusements—not so unlike our own prize-fighting civilization, but more dangerous.

The bulls of ancient Crete, imported, perhaps, from the Spanish peninsula, where bull-fighting reigns today, were powerful, active creatures.

Ask the modern rodeo "steer-wrestler" what he thinks of this performance, and he will tell you it is impossible. But it happened, and was even part of semi-religious exercises, in which highly bred young girls took part. You never can tell what a man or a woman can do until the attempt is made.

Ask your prize-fighting friend how he would like to make a living as this Cretan girl of ancient days made her living. He would not like it.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—The passing of Conan Doyle and the spurt of first page exploitation it inspired has developed a sudden enormous interest in psychic phenomena. Weekly and daily seances have not been unusual for years, but today hundreds are being held nightly.

Not long ago I was a goggle-eyed visitor at one in a lower Broadway office building late at night. My cicerone had first to telephone a certain number and ask for a gentleman by initials only. Very twittery! When we arrived a watchman escorted us to a rear elevator.

The seance was billeted to a shadowy room that seemed an ordinary business office. A few were there seated about in chairs, conversing in subdued whispers. From time to time others trickled in tip-toeing about in hushed expectancy.

It was one of those insufferably hot nights of late summer. All windows were closed and doors locked. After a half hour's wait it became so unbearably stifling that, as much as several would have liked to remain, we had to depart for a breath of fresh air.

Many mediums are now located in the West 20's, one block being dubbed "Spook Row" by neighboring skeptics. Due to watchful vigilance against sooth-saying, fortune telling is surreptitious. Mediums merely charge a fixed price and try to demonstrate mediumship.

Seances consist largely of trance messages, trumpetings, automatic writing and so-called "materializing" of those who have "gone on." Mediums studiously avoid thought of extinction. There are, of course, visitors in a larkish spirit, to expose, if possible, fakery.

Yet it is surprising the tremendous number of intelligent men and women who drift from one medium to another. They are not always believers, but they do not go to jeer. They go with open minds seeking a little pathetically that unsolvable riddle of transition known as Death.

A new play is titled "72d Street." And whispers are it will deal with that murmurous slip between Central Park, West, and Riverside Drive, which has undergone such an odd metamorphosis in the past ten years. From the West Side's most aristocratic area, it suddenly turned harsh with a wordly hurrah.

A sedate bachelor friend has lived for 25 years on West 72d street. Until recently he rarely ventured beyond a nearby corner where he dined. He had not been out of the city in 30 years. But with the harsh invasion of his street he went all of a sudden sporty—no end! Over night he married a joyous dumbell half his age and twice his speed. He has not been in town for two weeks at a stretch since. I bumped into him the other day, just in from Alaska and packing for a Mediterranean cruise. Bucketty-bucketty! * * *

Dropping in to see a barber who shaved me for years on West Seventy-second and is still lathering faces, he said only three old customers are in the neighborhood. "It is a flip talking Broadway crowd now," he sighed. This barber still plays the ponies. It has cost him a home, the fruits of years of monotony and he is always, as he says, "down to the cushion," yet no argument dissuades him. Joe Williams in a philosophic moment blabbed: "The barber is always a hoss player. That is why he is always a barber." * * *

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

If you are fortunate enough to have a good job, give a less favored person a chance to earn a little money.

There are many men who are willing to do odd jobs in order to help support themselves and their families until they can procure permanent positions.

You may be able to do the jobs about your home and premises, but why not give the work to some one unemployed?

In this way you could assist those facing serious problems.

If every person who could afford to do so in this country would give a few hours' employment to idle men who want work, a change for the better would result.

This would be preferable to handing out money to those in need.

Any man would rather work for what he gets if he is worth helping.

The odd-job plan might be carried down to the householder with only a small place with good results.

In this way thousands would be given some work and those who can afford to employ them would have the satisfaction of doing something to help out during the present industrial depression.

You should consider it your duty to do your part in helping.
